DANIEL SAFFORD.

BY REV. ISAAC P. LANGWORTHY, CHELSEA, MS.

It was not yet fully light, Sabbath morning, January 1, 1813, when Mr. William Adams went to borrow fire of his neighbor, with which to kindle his own. On his return, his attention was attracted to a robust young man, who was approaching him with quick and vigorous step, in a short gray overcoat and yellow buckskin gloves. They met in grateful recognition; Mr. Adams being the only individual known to the country youth in the great town of Boston. He had long been a friend of the young man's father, was a Christian, and by occupation a blacksmith. He took the youth to his own house, and to Park Street Church all day; and the next day they formed a business copartnership. The senior had in stock and tools two hundred and forty dollars; the junior had twenty dollars in money, which he had earned in doing extra work while an apprentice, and he gave his note for the remaining two hundred and twenty dollars. Their iron was purchased and paid for, bar at a time, and was carried to their shop on the shoulders of the young man.

A steady attendant on the preaching of Dr. Griffin every Sabbath, and an indefatigable laborer six days in the week, this youth of now twenty-one had passed his first business year. At its close, he took a careful inventory of its results. His expenses amounted to only two hundred dollars; his share of the net gain, to three hundred dollars. He now had, after paying the copartnership note, a little left that he could call his own. Near his place of toil was an aged, pious, but poor widow, residing in an attic, who subsisted as best she could on the contributions of the giving. Her situation and wants, connected with her age and character, appealed strongly to the Christian sympathies of the young blacksmith. He could now help her. He bought her a small load of wood, hired it sawed, and then in his own arms, after his full day's work, carried it up the winding stairs to her room. Thus began the charities of Dea. Daniel Safford, whose sunny face shines so benignantly from the opposite page. From such a foreshadowing, it required no prophet's ken to predict a successful, beneficent and happy future. How exactly such a prediction was fulfilled, the sequel will indicate.

DANIEL SAFFORD was born in Hamilton, Essex Co., Ms., Oct. 31, 1792. He was the youngest of four sons. A praying father, who was a farmer in moderate circumstances, consecrated him to Christ and gave him religious instruction. Until Daniel was eight years of age, he was sent to school six weeks in the winter, and six weeks in summer. After that age his services were needed on the farm in summer, so that his school privileges were thenceforth narrowed down to the six weeks of winter school, and these only until he was sixteen. At this age he went to Salem to learn the blacksmith's trade, of his eldest brother. Here he soon formed the acquaintance of three young men, whom he at length found to be profane and licentious. On returning late one night, after retiring, not to sleep, but to think, he became alarmed in view of his imminent peril. Conscience was thoroughly aroused, and he plainly saw that, though he had not fallen into any of the vices of his new comrades, he was yet fast nearing the fearful vortex, and that there was no safety for him but to flee while flight was possible. He determined to leave them at once, and ere the morning's dawn his purpose to pursue an entirely different course was intelligently and firmly taken. He reckoned upon the scorn and ridicule of these new and so-called friends—nor was he disappointed. But he was fortified against all such assaults. Ere long he cherished a hope that God had for Christ's sake forgiven his sins, and accepted him as his own. At the age of nineteen, he united with the Tabernacle Church at Salem, under the pastoral charge of Rev. Samuel Worcester, D. D. When a little over twenty, he commenced business in Boston, January 2, 1813, in which place he made his future home. In 1817, at the age of twenty-four, he was married to Miss Sarah Ashton, of Boston. He hired a comfortable house near his shop, and furnished it with second-hand furniture, every article of which he carried to his house after his full day's work. Thus economically and laboriously he began his career as the head of a family. His business enlarging, he had apprentices, sometimes ten at a time, all of whom he took to his own home. These were all required to be present at family worship, and to attend divine service somewhere regularly on the Sabbath. And he no less earnestly sought and labored for their personal interest in Christ. Five of them became his partners during his active business life, all of them Christian men. Mrs. Safford lived only about ten years, leaving no children. But an older brother's early decease left four orphans, who were all taken to the home of Mr. Safford and treated as his own, years previous to the decease of his first wife. They were the light of his dwelling; especially the "little daughter," from whom, however, he was called early to part, in circumstances exceedingly trying and afflictive.

December 24, 1828, Mr. Safford was married to Miss Abby J. Bigelow, of Colchester, Ct. This union on earth was brief, and another affliction was in store for him. Mrs. Safford lived only about two years after her marriage, leaving one son, who survives both parents, now a merchant in New York.

April 27, 1831, Mr. Safford was married to Mrs. Mary S. Boardman, of Reading, Ms. Again the bitter cup was pressed to his lips. In a little more than one year after this marriage, he followed his third companion to the grave. An infant son survived the death of his mother, and is now a minister of the gospel.

On the 24th of June, 1833, Mr. Safford was married to Mrs. Ann Eliza Turner, of Colchester, Ct., a sister of the second Mrs. Safford, named above.—She still lives.

Not only was Mr. Safford frequently stricken and smitten of God in his own immediate family; but while yet a young man he had followed to the grave his father, his three brothers, and each of their companions, besides other kindred.

He retired from active business in the year 1849, not, however, to be idle, but to direct his entire energies to other important pursuits. He was early recognized by the citizens of Boston as competent to hold positions of trust and responsibility. He was called to fill important offices in the city and State; was three winters in the House of Representatives and two in the Senate of Massachusetts. He was president of the City Missionary Society from 1850 to the time of his death, and during that entire period was closely identified with its self-denying work. The same year he was elected a member of the Prudential Committee of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, and was always prompt at its weekly meetings as long as he could go out at all. He was among the first and foremost in establishing the Female Seminary at South Hadley.

Soon after reaching Boston, Mr. Safford united with the Park Street Church. He was fond of mentioning the fact—which is worth recording here for the eye especially of every pastor—that one day, while at work over his anvil, he was surprised to see stooping to enter his low door, the tall and dignified Dr. Griffin, his pastor, who said, on approaching him, "I have come to seek you out, as I have noticed you a regular attendant on my preaching." He remained a worshiper in Park Street until 1827, at the formation of the Church in Salem Street, when by especial request he went with others to build up for Christ at the "North End." Here he was first chosen deacon. In 1835, he returned to Park Street, only for three months, however, when, with a few others, he went to Franklin Street to commence another Church, now the "Central." In about two and a half years, in accordance with a previous agreement, he returned to Park Street, where he remained until 1842, at which time he became identified with the Mount Vernon Church, from which he was translated to the Church triumphant. He had very much to do in projecting, gathering and establishing this Church.¹

To speak of such a man in fitting terms, or to portray even indistinctly a character so complete, in the few pages here allowed, is no easy task. To tell all would require a volume. To speak truly, without exaggeration, will seem to one who knew him not, like panegyric. For twenty-one years before his decease the writer met him often and knew him well. The opinions herein expressed were formed from personal acquaintance and knowledge.

Dea. Safford was not a "great man" in the sense in which that phrase is commonly used. He was born in neither extreme of society. His course in life was heralded by no fame of birth or rank or fortune, nor on the other hand was it hedged in or foreclosed by the seemingly impassable barriers of an ignominious origin. Born of respectable parents in moderate circumstances, he began his useful career at a point of departure, difficult indeed, but possible. And he gained his ultimate and enviable height by no sudden leaps, by no adventitious or hap-hazard interventions, but by a steady, conscientious application of all the powers God had given him to the useful objects of life. He lost no time and enervated no faculty of mind or heart in envy or jealousy. He was happy in the success of his compeers—satisfied with making the most of himself—ambitious to no other end. He ran a race with no one but Daniel Safford, and strove to outdo no other. Nor did he give his precious moments to vain and useless pleasures. He sought and he found his highest enjoyment in acquiring and doing that which was useful. And though not of mental endowments such as command by their greatness and dazzle by their brilliancy, yet by the considerate and prayerful use of the powers he had, he made his influence deeply felt in every circle in which he moved. The world has few such examples of what honest, earnest efforts can accomplish when well directed. Few have left behind them good impressions, more ineffaceable, or memories that will be longer or more cordially cherished.

Dea. Safford was not a learned man. Six weeks schooling in winter and six weeks in summer, from four to eight years of age, and six weeks only in winter from eight to sixteen, would not be likely to make a learned man of any one. There was no precocity that marked his early life. He was a proficient in mathematics and in natural philosophy, considering his opportunities. But he did not cease study when he ceased going to school. Leisure for study he never had while in active business. But reading to a limited extent was a part of his life. So in writing. His style was pure, simple, direct and lucid, without an unnecessary word. His letters are models. This came of thought and study. It did not happen. He kept himself well posted in matters of general interest, and in his later years was more conversant with books. It may be said in truth that he had no facilities for literary acquisitions which are not within the reach of every earnest young man desiring knowledge.

Dea. Safford was not a genius, remarkable for any one particular trait of character or quality of mind. His mind was admirably and evenly balanced. The world has few men who could do so many things so well as he. This was owing, doubtless, in a great degree to the even and rigid discipline to which he had subjected himself in cultivating carefully every power of his being. He did not make new things his study, emulous of an inventor's renown. Yet some useful things in the line of his peculiar calling owe their origin to the application of his mathematical and philosophical tastes and acquirements. There are many things in church architecture, and especially in church furnishings, also in domestic arrangements and conveniences which were modestly suggested, or projected and perhaps executed by him. To an observer he would seem to see, by intuition, just the right thing for the right place at exactly the right time, and yet he would always give a good reason for his suggestion. He did as little at hazard as perhaps any man who did so much. He was not fond of mere experiments.

Dea. Safford was not a rich man. Wealth was not his ambition, but usefulness. For this he lived and labored. He was industrious, prudent, wise in investing, and in this way, earlier than most, gained an amount which enabled him to retire safely from active business. During this whole period of thirty-six years, he prosecuted his business with a fidelity, and upon such principles of Christian integrity, as quickly gained for him a business reputation second to none in his sphere. He was not long obliged to buy his iron, bar at a time, and only for cash; nor was he long compelled to carry it on his shoulders to his shop. He found friends because he deserved them, made them and "showed himself friendly." Prompt in all his own payments, and careful never to become liable for what he could not see a fair prospect of meeting when due, he secured a basis for credit every way adequate to any business emergency. The writer, driven by over work and threatening disease, from home to a voyage at sea and a tour through Europe, in 1850, deposited with Baring and Brother's agent in Boston an amount of money supposed to be sufficient for all ordinary expenses, and took a "letter of credit" for the same. But a careful foresight and custom in such cases suggested provision against possible detentions and disasters, in permission to draw for a larger amount than the cash deposit would allow. To secure this privilege, a good indorser was very properly required. The names of some six or eight gentlemen and firms of business character and standing were given, whose indorsement could be procured. But the agent did not know them. At length he said, "get Daniel Safford's indorsement, and you may draw for as much as you please." None but those similarly situated can appreciate the relief his willing signature afforded. The same name has many a time been a "tower of strength" to others than a poor, feeble minister, giving them character in business circles, and profits too not otherwise easily obtained. He knew the difficulties through which young men without capital must struggle and was always glad to aid them by wise counsel, and often by other facilities which his means would enable him to afford. Upon his income he lived in a style answering to his tastes, enabling him to accommodate family friends, to receive the stranger and always to keep open and well furnished the prophet's chamber, or chambers indeed, which by the way, rarely failed to be occupied. But he had still a surplus left with which to aid the work of Christian benevolence in amounts seldom equalled by those of so small a capital. This was consecrated, and God made it productive. He cared for money chiefly to do good with. His money he felt was a lent blessing. He regarded himself as the Lord's steward. Hence his great usefulness; and his frequent large gifts to objects of real merit were not so much from the abundance he possessed, as from the conscientious and careful prudence with which he managed it, and the prayerful and judicious manner in which he always disbursed it.

Dea. Safford was not a public speaker. Though fluent and always agreeable in his private conversation, he was never forward to speak on public occasions. While a member of the Legislature, he was rarely heard, unless an exigency demanded his voice. So in prayer-meetings, so on ecclesiastical councils, where he was very frequently invited. His practice on all such occasions was, first, never to speak unless he had something to say, and second, to stop when he got through. He was a member of an ecclesiastical council a few years previous to his death, when an excommunicated member complained that the church, under the ruling of the pastor, had proceeded quite contrary to the rules of Congregationalism, and had thus wrongfully cut him off. To sustain the complainant, who was evidently in the wrong, to say the least, would implicate the pastor, who had as evidently gone quite beyond his prerogatives. The testimony was full and clear on both those points. The case was skilfully managed on the part of the church and its pastor. There was a full discussion by the council when by themselves. By appointment, a former pastor of Dea. Safford prepared a result entirely exonerating the minister, and made an earnest speech in its defence. No one immediately replying, Dea. Safford arose, and in a few fitting words expressed his high respect for ministers of the gospel and his great reluctance by word or vote to cast even a seeming censure upon any of them, but "truth," he added, "has higher claims than they." In a few forcible and plain sentences he presented the case as it seemed to him, and as it was in fact; he gave the reasons why he could not vote for the result as it had been presented; and closed by saying, if it was adopted, he should insist upon having his protest entered upon the minutes of the council, and that as much for the sake of the ministry as for the party now aggrieved. As soon as he sat down the author of the result, whispering to the brother who was sitting near him, said, "there is no such thing as resisting Dea. Safford's common-sense logic." Another result was quickly prepared, in accordance with the views Dea. Safford had expressed, and it was at once unanimously adopted. Many such instances could be related to show the singular ability with which he always spoke, if he spoke at all.

While he never coveted or sought to secure a social standing which is usually conceded to the aristocracy, obtained often without merit and lost without cause, he nevertheless occupied a position high enough to be respected by the highest, yet from which he could reach to the lowest to bless and uplift them. None needed to stoop to reach him; for as a Christian citizen he was on a level with the most elevated, while at the same time the humblest could approach him with confidence and esteem. Such a social standpoint gave him many advantages for usefulness, of which he seldom failed to avail himself. And he attained it by no accident, but by deserving it. Through all intervening obstacles he arose by conquering them, instead of yielding to them. And he has left behind him a luminous example of what honest endeavor can accomplish when properly directed. His natural modesty, his large measure of common sense, his general knowledge of men and things, his easy manners, his always neat person and cheerful spirit made him a welcome and desirable companion to any one in any circle.

But above all and before all, Dea. Safford was a Christian. In this, more than in everything else pertaining to his untarnished reputation and varied abilities, lay the secret of his power. In none of those things which the world places first and esteems most desirable—though in these, as has been seen, he was not wanting—is the charm of his character found. He was a Christian. From the first, he took a high and decided stand. From the first, he cherished in his own mind and heart the great principles of the Christian scheme. His religion and his life were one, Sabbath and week day alike, in prosperity and under the deep shadows of affliction, the same. No pressure or promise of business could swerve him from his duties in the closet, or to his family, to his apprentices, to the church, or to such objects of want as commanded his sympathies and won his confidence. He was an every day Christian, a growing Christian.

He was a man of prayer; and, as a Christian, he could do no less than pray. But he did more than most who admit they do, and must pray. While yet a young man he prayed, not with especial gifts, but always with especial wants, and thus he gained audience with heaven. Going with an errand to the throne of grace, a very common sameness in that service was avoided. Though naturally timid, by grace he was enabled to act the Christian on occasions where many would have said; "I pray thee have me excused." He was called home to the death-bed of his father. His older brothers were present with their chosen companions. When about to leave, his father said, "Daniel, can you pray with me?" Here was a trial both of the faith and the moral courage of the young blacksmith; but in nothing moved, he took the weeping circle to the mercy seat, where already he was no stranger. It was a privilege to join him in prayer at his own family altar, and in the prayer meeting. It was always delightful to witness with what directness, simplicity, and confidence, totally without cant or affected fervor, he would address the throne of grace. He did not make long prayers. If he did not do everything by prayer, he did not undertake anything important, secular or sacred, until he had spread it all out before his Heavenly Father. In a letter to his son in New York he says: "It has been my habit when about to take any important step in business, to ask divine guidance as sincerely as for spiritual blessings; and although I do not expect the Lord to answer in an audible voice, I do expect he will so influence my mind as to lead me to decide in such a manner as will be best on the whole." And it was because he relied so much, so constantly, and so confidently on prayer, that the reliance seldom, if ever, failed him. He loved the prayer meeting, and was a regular, as he was a delighted attendant upon its services. He was one of the few who originated the daily prayer meetings of Boston—held first at Park street, afterwards and now in Old South Chapel; and so long as he was able he attended them. He delighted in social prayer, and availed himself of the privilege of inviting to his home Christian friends to engage in prayer, especially in times of any religious interest. His house was always a house of prayer. Others will remember, with the writer, a meeting of all the city missionaries at his house for business connected with their peculiar work. The city pastors and their companions were invited to be present. While the business was being transacted, Mrs. Safford with the lady guests had a season of prayer in her chamber. Then all met in the large parlors, where prayer, singing, and exhortations occupied an hour or more. Then, and not till then, all were invited to an entertainment in the dining room. Prayer, praise, religion was kept in the foreground, not mechanically or by a seeming effort, but naturally, pleasantly, as though it were a necessary, and the chief, part in the programme. Every one felt it was good to be there. And here is an example to all Christian householders everywhere, who ever call their friends together for social enjoyments. Why not honor God, and recognize his claims first and chiefest, feasting upon the hidden manna? How much small talk, scandal, and vain jesting would thus be expelled from all Christian society, while the better things of a better world would be most profitably substituted.

Dea. Safford was a benevolent man. His gifts were frequent and surprisingly large to those who knew the amount of his property. That beginning with the poor, pious and aged widow, when first he found he had a few dollars of his own, already named, inaugurated a career of Christian munificence worthy of all imitation. Perhaps it may be truly said that he never gave from impulse, but always deliberately and from fixed Christian principle. When he consecrated himself to Christ, he consecrated his substance also, and his powers of acquisition. He, moreover, gave on system, setting apart all that he deemed safe to give, and then he divided it to the the different objects according to his judgment of their relative claims. And of these he made himself familiar; thus he was able to give intelligently. He was, moreover, "a cheerful giver;" more so than any other individual ever known to the writer. And this, not because he had such an abundance that he knew not what to do with it, but because he could thus do good, honor Christ, minister to Him by ministering to his poor. He did, moreover, what too many omit to do, viz., he kept an account of what and where he gave for his own eye. He thus saved himself from the cheat to which all who give anything subject themselves if they do not as he did. Without such a corrector and detector of the fraud, the giver of the dime now and then, and the dollar once a month, will be sure he has given very largely, and almost daily. The pennies magnify themselves into pounds in the retrospect, and immeasurably less is given than is supposed. There is no forestalling the deception, but by the figures, in clear black and white. Dea. Safford saved himself from such a snare by this only sure method. When commencing the first building for the Winnisimmet church, in Chelsea, in the autumn of 1841, the pastor elect went to Dea. Safford for some plain brackets upon which to suspend the lamps. He showed some that had been used in another church for that purpose, but were just what were wanted. He says: "I will have them put in good order and give them to your church." But some months subsequently the bill from his firm was sent to the treasurer of the church. An explanation was asked. He looked at the bill, and smilingly said, "I guess it is all right." He was reminded of the promised gift. "I think I have already made a donation to that church in another way," he replied; "and if I have not, I will. I can tell in a moment." Turning to his private memorandum, he found his mistake, and at once receipted the bill, giving it back with as much pleasure as though the full amount had been paid him. The memorandum only corrected his usually very accurate memory. This enabled him at a glance always to know how much he was the debtor of benevolence, as he could not otherwise have known. A poor student at Andover was working his way to college in 1835, then finding a temporary home at the house of the Rev. Justin Edwards, D. D. Mrs. Edwards was a sister of Mrs. Safford. He gave some service to the family and in the garden during his hours of relaxation from study, as a small compensation for his board. For some trifling attention to Dea. Safford, while on a visit there, five dollars, subsequently ten dollars, came from his generous hand, so quietly and pleasantly to the hand of the needy young man, that it seemed more like requiting a well-deserved obligation, than making a donation. When about to leave for college he was sadly disappointed in failing to collect forty dollars, which had been sacredly reserved and confidently relied upon to enter him at Yale. He did not know whither to turn, nor could he cover or conceal his disappointment, his face betraying him. His kind hostess, upon discovering the "written sorrow," urged an explanation, upon which she remarked "never mind, trust in the Lord, he will provide." That is possible, thought he, but how, was far enough from being apparent. Dea. Safford and a brother of Mrs. Safford, from New York were then on a visit to Andover. Before that day closed, Mrs. Edwards brought to the disappointed young man more than the amount he had lost, saying it was the joint gift of the two visitors named above, and adding, "if you ever find yourself in want again, you had better let them know." The raven's first visit to the starving prophet and the miraculous supply of his wants through an instrumentality so peculiar, could not have more surprised or delighted him than did this generous gift, the poor student who received it. Twenty-one years afterward, just before he entered the spirit land, Dea. Safford was reminded of these gifts, and of the great indebtedness of the receiver to him for their timely bestowment. He had entirely forgotten that he had ever given him anything, and not until the "record" was consulted could he recall the fact; so little, after all, did his left hand know what his right hand did. What he did in this world was done in view of, and for, that world which is to come. His treasure and his heart were there. His investments for Christ, when made, were left in his care, and hence, afterwards were not objects of thought, and often passed entirely from his memory.

He was in the habit of giving all his income over and above necessary expenses. The former he could calculate with considerable accuracy beforehand. His ordinary gifts through the more common channels were pre-arranged with reference to his income, and expenses were made subservient to this arrangement. In 1848, the American Board was deeply in debt. At the annual meeting, held in Boston, an earnest effort was made to pay off, or at least, to greatly reduce this debt then and there, and strong and touching appeals were made with this noble end in view. Subscriptions were volunteered and announced from time to time, varying from one hundred to one thousand dollars each. Dea. Safford was seen to enter the house, go directly to his pastor, speaking with him for a moment. His pastor went immediately upon the platform and spoke to the Treasurer of the Board, who soon announced another subscription of five hundred dollars, but he gave no name. It was natural enough to suspect Dea. Safford as the giver, from what had transpired. To one knowing his habits of giving or pledging all his probable income before so late in the year, there was a natural curiosity to know how it came about. So a friend dining with him that day, half seriously and half playfully, finding him alone, inquired how it was. Throwing his arm around him, and drawing him close to his side, as he often did, he said, "You know Peter and the carriage I got for Mrs. Safford. They are hers. But she is now better. When I listened to the condition and wants of the Board, at the Temple, I thought I must do something. If we should sell Peter and the carriage we could give five hundred dollars. So I ran home and asked Mrs. Safford, and she said YES. Then I went back and made the subscription, but I did not mean it should be known from whom it came." The sacrifice in feeling and convenience to both was great, and especially to Mrs. Safford, as her health was far from being restored, but it was cheerfully made as unto Christ; and it is worthy of remark, that in this case the will was taken for the deed by Him for whose sake it was done. A propitious Providence enabled them to pay their subscription and after all keep their favorite horse. Dea. Safford had always given largely to the Board, considering his resources. But from this time to the year of his death his donations to the Board alone were never less than one thousand dollars a year. When compared with the donations of many, indeed with most, if not with all, who have two, three, five or ten times his wealth, his gifts were princely, yet always modestly and cheerfully bestowed. But other objects were very dear to him because they were dear to Christ. His first large donation was to the American Education Society, of one thousand dollars to found a scholarship, as it was called. This was made in the year 1827, while he was yet a young man and of comparatively small capital. His appreciation of an educated ministry and his sympathy for poor young men struggling through untold difficulties to become qualified for the sacred office inclined him to an effort then, from which many, with immensely larger resources, would have shrunk. Nor did his interest flag in the least in this object after one gift so noble. He was not only an annual contributor to the funds of this society, but he aided individuals frequently and generously, as many a living preacher can testify. It has been before intimated that he took an early and deep interest in the Mount Holyoke Female Seminary, at South Hadley. Miss Lyon made his house her home while she was working out that great thought. She consulted him often and much. He came soon to sympathize deeply with her in planning and starting that institution. He gave largely in founding it. And what was better for Miss Lyon and her institution, he gave much precious time and toil in superintending, arranging and furnishing the building. Both his tact and his taste, both his skill and great executive ability, came happily into requisition here, and were exerted to a very important end. He lived to rejoice in the great success of that Seminary. He often spoke with tender and tearful delight of the frequent conversions at South Hadley, and of the great good of which that institution was made the instrument, but never, however, alluding to the fact that he had done so much and so well to establish it.

To the poor he was an especial friend. The open books only will reveal how many widows and orphans have found an asylum in his house, have obtained relief from his open purse, and sympathy from his warm and overflowing heart. Many a poor young man is indebted to him for his place in business by his personal influence and timely counsels. Many now living will say that Dea. Safford was the first man in Boston who ever took them kindly by the hand and made them feel that they had a friend. The last out-door work of his life was in aid of the woman Charlotte, who was raising funds to purchase the freedom of her nearest earthly kindred. He not only gave her money, but went with her to those from whom she could have received nothing but for his presence. Thus every way did this servant of the Lord use his substance as well as his personal influence for the varied objects of Christian benevolence. In 1833, he had secured in his business all the capital he ever meant to invest for himself or his family. He continued in business, however, sixteen years longer, solely to make money for the Lord's treasury. He then retired because, he said, "younger men want and ought to have my place." During the last twenty-nine years of his life, he gave directly and consecrated to strictly benevolent causes one hundred and six thousand dollars, besides many days and weeks of unwearying toil. While he provided well for his entire household and dependent kindred, of whom he had not a few, and made ample arrangements for their future comfort; beyond this he had no disposition to go. All besides he felt was consecrated to a higher service. In his last sickness, a former pastor called to see him. He was reclining on a sofa. The kind minister said to him, "Dea. Safford, you must have great satisfaction in the good you have been permitted to do." The tears came to his eyes, and ran down upon the pillow on which he lay. "Look upon me as a poor sinner, to be saved only by grace," he replied, as soon as he could recover himself. He saw and he claimed no merit for anything he had done.

Dea. Safford loved revivals of religion. He did not believe they would happen. He acknowledged cheerfully and gratefully the Divine sovereignty in their bestowment. Still he trusted in the inspired assurance, that for these, as for other promised gifts, the Lord would be inquired of. He did not believe that any interpretation of sovereignty was true which precluded or discouraged all well-directed efforts to secure the blessing desired. He was always ready for days of fasting and prayer; for extra services in preaching, visiting and praying, indeed for any service that promised good results. He was never inclined to censure any who might honestly differ from him, nor was he disposed to stand by and dictate to others, or advise to a labor from which he would excuse himself. It was always "come, brethren," not "go." He was early, if not first and foremost, in anything to be done. In the frequent revivals, with which the Winnisimmet Church in Chelsea was blessed, it was as delightful and refreshing as it was always helpful and encouraging to the pastor, to witness the deep and tender interest with which he would listen to every item concerning them. The pleasing news was sometimes communicated to him, when there was no especial interest in the churches of Boston, but he was always prepared to rejoice in it. Few Christians lived in that continued and unvarying spiritual state in which he could always be found. And let it not be said that this excellency was attained unto by natural temperament, or by mere mental discipline. It was more the result of high religious aims, and the fruit of deeply-fixed religious principle. He felt that a hope which would avail for him at death must cheer and bless him in life, and this he daily delighted in, and was thus always quick to discern, as he was ready to welcome, the returning Spirit.

He had great catholicity, and was never a sectarian. While doubtless he had a decided preference for the simple Church polity in which he had been educated, he nevertheless loved Christ more than he loved sect. Christians of every name and everywhere were his brethren. His great desire was to see Christ honored in the salvation of souls, by whatever instrumentality he might choose. And for this end he labored personally, conversing with individuals from day to day, making them especial subjects of prayer. And in this especial work God favored him. It may not be said that, in this respect, he was a Harlan Page, perhaps, but not a few will greet him in heaven as the instrument of their salvation.

Dea. Safford was a cheerful Christian. In this particular he was remarkable. He moved on a level above the little eddies and currents which disturb the most of, even very good, men. He was seldom seen but with a lighted countenance, beaming with Christian love and confidence. A minister once went to him with a matter which was quite annoying, but not easy, if indeed it was possible, to adjust. He listened patiently—much more so than the relator told his story—when he said very mildly, “why trouble yourself about this difficulty which you cannot remedy? Two things I never fret about. One is, things I can help; the other is, things I cannot help.” It was an admirable hint, and not without its good effect. He knew how to meet all such cases with remarkable skill, and sometimes he would do it very playfully; as once to a young man, who, with others, had become very much excited, and who in his haste, and almost frenzy, was not a little wanting in Christian propriety, he said, “Mr. —, you had better go home and take a seidlitz powder.” The cooling effect of the prescription was so marked and immediate, that the refrigerant draught was not needed. A pastor once told him of some unpleasant matters transpiring in his own church, which seemed to him evil and only evil continually, yet there was no apparent method of either reaching or controlling them. He said, “leave them with God. In a short time, it may be, you will see that good will come of it to the Church and to you, whatever may become of these disturbers.” After he was confined to his room in his last sickness, he overheard the relation of the exact fulfilment of his prediction, in the purity and peace of the Church and quiet of the pastor, to which he said, “it is always safe to trust where you cannot see.” In his religious experience, he had no such raptures as Payson had—as others have had, and on the other hand, he had no such depressions as were theirs. He was not of an excitable temperament. He had always too much self-control for this. Yet his piety was of a cheerful type. He was never carried away from firm footing under any excited appeal or in any time of deep religious interest. He had keen and tender feelings, but his religion was that of principle rather than of emotion. His trust in a beneficent God, and his reliance upon an atoning Saviour, his abiding sense of the presence of the sanctifying Spirit were so intelligent, constant and satisfying that he could not be easily moved or disturbed. His hope was an anchor to his soul. Some ten years before his death, speaking of that event to one of his kindred, he said, “that matter I have settled; I have left it with my Heavenly Father.” It was his habit, as it was his delight, to draw consolation from the provisions of the gospel. His views of these were clear and ample. He dwelt upon and found his highest joy in contemplating their fulness and perfect adaptation to his wants. His religion made him uniformly happy. He had all the ordinary sources of enjoyment open to the highly-favored of this world, but in no one, nor in all of them, did he rest as a portion. On his dying bed he said, “I have a great deal to live for, but to depart and be with Christ is far better.”

Dea. Safford was confined to his house about five weeks, and to his chamber about one week before he died. His disease was of the heart, and very distressing. He retained his reason fully to the last. And not this only. His self-control and self-reliance were very remarkable. He was ready to meet any exigency as it arose; insisted on sitting up to write his own name when he had scarcely strength to hold, much less to guide his pen. His natural care for the comfort of others was strong, even to the last. The first watcher he had out of his own family was all night long cared for by the sick man, quite unintentionally, but it was so natural that it seemed unavoidable.

His hope was bright and cheering. On the Sabbath of his decease, his pastor and a brother deacon called to see him. He cordially greeted both, and said, "kind pastor, good brother." It was said to him, "your pastor has come to comfort you." He replied, "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith the Lord," and then asked, "can you tell me how far it is across Jordan?" His peace was like a river, his trust unshaken. But for the deeply-interesting details of "how the good man met his fate" the reader is referred to the book before named. He was ready at the call of his Master. He often said, "Lay me at the feet of Jesus and let me die." "Don't take me away from Jesus' feet." His last distinct utterance, except "that's good," on receiving some drink, was, "Father—Son—and—Holy—Ghost,—Alleluiah." February 3, 1856, he went peacefully to his rest, aged sixty-three years. He was buried from Mount Vernon Church, in Mount Auburn Cemetery, a great congregation of clergymen and business men, city missionaries and others, attesting their deep affection for him by attending his funeral.

Thus passed away a good man whose memory is precious. His history illustrates the best and highest type of a man, a Christian man, a true man, in all the relations of life. From no extrinsic advantages he arose; but by means open and available to any and almost every one in our country who has similar aims. Starting in life with noble impulses and putting his trust in God, step by step, with sure tread he went up and on, never turned aside from his purpose when once it was fully formed. He was cautious but decided. His success cannot be ascribed to any one peculiar trait in character, but to many, if not to every one. His common sense, sanctified by daily prayer, his substance, consecrated to God and used for his glory, his social and domestic relations, hallowed by religious services, his quick discernment of the right, his tact and dispatch, his unwearied industry and physical strength, devoted to the highest good of his fellow men, and his honest and sincere inquiry, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"—these and such as these gave him power, and were the earnest, as they were the guarantee, of his success. Let his footprints be marked and his history be studied and his life held up before all young men, who would fulfill their own high destiny. By no accident will his elevated position be reached by the most favored. To gain it is worth a life-struggle, however, to any one. Let religion bless, purify and inspire toil. Let it be carried into business, and no business be attempted into which religion may not come. Let it pervade the family, social, and civil relations as he made it. Let every man be determined and contented, by the grace of God, to make the most of himself for this, and for that world which is to come. Such a purpose is indispensable. There can be no elevation, no progress without it. But the attainment is possible. There is a higher point for every one than is yet reached. The lowest has an open way before him. The highest may still see light upon light rising in the distance. The good to be done, the reward in reserve, and the glory of Him who bids all to come up higher, are considerations which ought to be influential. Let them have full sway over the reader as they had over DANIEL SAFFORD, in making him the man he was. Oh, the influence, happy and redeeming influence of one such a life! May thousands be persuaded to live as he lived, that their last end may be like his!

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES AND MINISTERS IN WINDHAM COUNTY, CT.

BY REV. ROBERT C. LEARNED, BERLIN, CT.

THE Church in Abington Society, which is the western part of Pomfret, was formed Jan. 31, 1753, being then the Third Church in the town. There have been set over it the following pastors:

DAVID RIPLEY.....Ord. Feb. 21, 1753
Dis. — — 1778
WALTER LYON.....Ord. Dec. 31, 1782
Died Feb. 11, 1826
CHARLES FITCH.....Ord. Apr. 30, 1828
Dis. May 2, 1832
NATHAN S. HUNT.....Ord. Feb. 12, 1834
Dis. Apr. 30, 1845
HENRY B. SMITH.....Inst. Jan. 14, 1852

Between Messrs. Hunt and Smith, the pulpit was supplied chiefly by Rev. Messrs. Edward Pratt, Sylvester Hine, and William Baldwin.

REV. DAVID RIPLEY was born at Windham, Scotland Society, a son of David and Lydia Ripley, and elder brother of Hezekiah (afterwards Rev. Dr.) Ripley. He graduated Y. C. 1749, and was A. M. in course, likewise at Harvard, in 1754; was approved by Windham Association, May 19, 1752; began soon after to preach in Abington, and on the 24th of December was called to settlement, being offered 1200 pounds, old tenor, to be paid in two years, as a settlement and a salary, which was to begin at 500, and rise gradually to 600 pounds,—the money being made equal to wheat at forty shillings, rye at thirty shillings, Indian corn at twenty shillings, and oats at ten shillings per bushel; and pork at two shillings and beef at sixteen pence per pound. The Church was formed on a Fast-day held with reference to the ordination, Jan. 31, 1753. The ordination was on the 21st of February; sermon by Rev. Mr. Devotion, of Scotland. The charge thus received he held until sickness disabled him from doing the work of a pastor fully. Some difficulty then arose about his salary, but this was at length settled, and he was dismissed in 1778. He continued after this long enough to see a successor installed in his place, and died Sept. 2, 1785, aged fifty-five years.

Mr. Ripley is said to have been a good preacher, and was successful in guiding the affairs of his parish prosperously and happily, receiving considerable numbers to the Church, and holding the people together until the latter part of his ministry. He is not known to have published anything. He married Betsey, daughter of Rev. Jacob Eliot, of Lebanon, and had five children, of whom the only son that grew to manhood became Rev. David Bradford Ripley, for some years pastor in Marlborough. His widow died in Abington, Aug. 1, 1807, in her seventy-second year.

REV. WALTER LYON was born in Woodstock; graduated D. C. 1777, and was A. M. at Yale in 1782; was called to settle at Abington, Aug. 20, 1782, and was ordained Jan. 1, 1783; the sermon by Rev. Joshua Paine, of Sturbridge, Ms. He continued in office till death, and, like his predecessor, sleeps with his flock. His grave-stone says that "he died in the triumphs of faith, Feb. 11, 1826, in the 68th year of his age, and 44th of his ministry." A successor describes him as "remarkably exact," "a strict disciplinarian," &c. He was more successful than most pastors in the accumulation of property, and made liberal bequests to some benevolent societies and to the Abington Society.

He married Mary Huntington, of Lebanon. His only child that survived infancy was Samuel Huntington Lyon, a merchant in Abington, who married Maria Warner, a grand-daughter of Rev. Mr. Ripley. This son died in 1823, aged thirty-seven, and left his father childless. Mr. Lyon died Oct. 6, 1846, aged eighty-five years.

Rev. CHARLES FITCH was born at Lisbon, Dec. 22, 1804, the youngest child of Daniel and Zipporah (Allen) Fitch. His father, a lineal descendant of Rev. James Fitch, of Norwich, served in the Revolutionary War, lost a brother in the battle at Monmouth, and died himself in West Killingly, in 1855, aged ninety-three. Mr. Fitch joined the Church in Hampton, under Rev. Mr. Weld, about 1822, having previously been employed in agricultural labors, and soon after began a course of preparation for the ministry; entered Brown University in 1824, but through embarrassments, resulting from his poverty, was obliged to leave without completing the College course; studied theology a while under Rev. C. B. Everest; was approved by Windham Association, Oct. 5, 1827, and received a call at Abington, Feb. 19, 1828. He was ordained on the 30th of April, following, the sermon by Rev. Philo Judson.

During this pastorate, Abington enjoyed a very powerful revival, thirty-three persons being received in one day to the Church. Mr. F. was however dismissed, May 2, 1832; installed at Western, (now Warren,) Ms., June 6, 1832, and dismissed June, 1834; installed again over the Fourth Church, Hartford, June 26, 1834; next installed over a Free Church, Boston, May 31, 1836, and once more over a Church in Newark, N. J., May, 1838. He afterwards preached a while in Haverhill, Ms., and in October, 1842, began a course of labor in Cleveland, O. He died at Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 14, 1844, on his way home from Philadelphia, where he had been preaching during the summer.

He was a powerful and impressive preacher,—very active in the revivals that prevailed throughout Windham Co. about 1831; but in his latter years, was partly separated from his former associates, in consequence of embracing the views of William Miller, as to the Second Advent of Christ.

Mr. Fitch published, in 1836, an Address, delivered at Pine Street Church, Boston; and in 1842, a Poem, entitled, "Full Redemption," with perhaps other occasional pamphlets. He married Zer-viah Roath, of Brooklyn, and had nine children, of whom four died before him.

Rev. NATHAN STRONG HUNT was born at Coventry, and is a grand-son of Rev. Nathan Strong, of that town, and a nephew of Rev. Dr. N. Strong, of Hartford, and Rev. Dr. J. Strong, of Norwich. He graduated W. C. 1830; studied theology at Andover; was ordained pastor at Abington, Feb. 12, 1834, and dismissed April 30, 1845; was installed at Preston, Oct. 20, 1847, where he continued in charge about ten years. He has since acted as minister of the Church in Bozrah.

Rev. HENRY B. SMITH was born at Westfield, Ms.; graduated A. C. 1843, and studied theology at Andover; was ordained pastor of the West parish in Granville, Ms., July 22, 1847, and dismissed Nov. 4, 1851. He was next installed at Abington, Jan. 14, 1852, where he remains in charge.

He has published an Historical Discourse, commemorative of the first hundred years of Abington Society, from which many of the facts mentioned in the above sketches have been drawn.

He married Sarah W., daughter of Rev. R. S. Hazen, of Westminster, and has several children.

PUTNAM.—This town was incorporated May, 1855, the territory being taken from Killingly, Pomfret and Thompson. The principal village is one which has grown up around certain manufacturing establishments, near the Station on the Norwich and Worcester Railroad; and it was for the convenience of these villages that the new town was formed. The Church in this village is of recent origin.

In the East part of the town, however, on a high hill, commanding a wide and pleasant prospect, stands the place of worship of the original Church of Killingly, long known as the North Killingly, but now as the East Putnam Church. This Church was formed Oct. 19, 1715, and has had the following pastors:

JOHN FISK,.....	Ord. Oct. 19, 1715

	Dis. April 3, 1838
HENRY ROBINSON,.....	Inst. Nov. 20, 1838
	Dis. April 1, 1845
JOHN D. BALDWIN,.....	Inst. Apr. 29, 1846
	Dis. Sept. 17, 1849

Since the last date, this Church has been supplied by Rev. Benjamin B. Hopkinson, Rev. Edward F. Brooks, and others.

Rev. JOHN FISK was born in that part of Braintree, Ms., which is now Quincy, Nov. 26, 1684, the son of Rev. Moses and Sarah (Symmes) Fisk, and grand-son of Rev. John Fisk, of Wenham and Chelmsford, Ms. He graduated H. C. 1702; came to Killingly, then newly settled, early in 1712, and was ordained Oct. 19, 1715, the same day that he and ten other men were organized into a Church. The sermon at his ordination was by Rev. Joseph Baxter, of Medfield, Ms., (a brother-in-law,) from Rom. i.: 16; the Right Hand by Mr. Estabrook, of Canterbury. In this charge Mr. Fisk remained, until, on the 21st of July, 1741, the Church voted to call Consociation, on the 5th of August, "to consider and determine the differences and difficulties between said Mr. Fisk and the Church, arising from several scandalous reports spread abroad concerning him." No record remains of the action of Consociation in the case; but tradition says that it resulted in the dismissal of

Mr. Fisk from his charge, under the burden of grave imputations of wrongdoing. He thenceforth occupied himself in the cultivation of his large landed estates in Killingly, and died there, May 18, 1773, in his eighty-ninth year. He is reported to have been a scholar and a man of superior abilities, but no publications present themselves to assist our judgment. The Church seems to have prospered under his guidance. A heavy calamity once befell him by the burning of his house and contents while he was at public worship on the Lord's Day.

Mr. Fisk married at Canterbury, Nov. 26, 1717, Abigail, daughter of Rev. Nehemiah Hobart, of Newton, Ms., and sister of the wife of Rev. Mr. Estabrook, of C.; by whom he had Sarah, who married Rev. James Osgood, of Stoneham, Ms.; Elizabeth, who married Rev. Joseph Torrey, of South Kingston, R. I., and Hannah, who married Joseph Torrey, Esq., of Killingly, a son of Rev. J. F., above mentioned, besides two children that died young. Mrs. Fisk died Sept. 26, 1780, in her ninety-sixth year.

Rev. PERLEY HOWE was a son of Capt. Sampson Howe, one of the constituent members of the Church in Killingly, and was born (probably in that town,) about 1710. He graduated H. C. 1731, and was ordained pastor in Dudley, Ms., June 12, 1735, but was dismissed in 1743, and soon removed to Killingly. Here he probably preached awhile before his installation, in 1746, over the First Church, the people having divided on the question of locating their meeting-house. His ministry here was cut short by the consumption, of which he died, March 10, 1753, in his forty-third year. There remains no record of his ministry, and no publication from his pen. He is reported as a good writer and an interesting preacher.

He married Damaris, daughter of Joseph Cady, Esq., of K., and had four sons and two daughters, of whom all settled in Killingly, except Joseph, who graduated

Y. C. 1765, and was pastor of the New South Church, Boston,—ordained 1773, and died of dysentery, in Hartford, Aug. 25, 1775.

Rev. AARON BROWN, son of Cornelius and Abigail Brown, of Windsor, was born May 3, 1725; graduated Y. C. 1749; was ordained Jan. 9, 1754, at Killingly, (the sermon, by Rev. Mr. Cabot, of Thompson, was afterwards published,) and remained in charge until his death, which occurred suddenly, at the house of Rev. Mr. Messenger, Ashford, Sept. 12, 1775, as he was returning from the funeral of his step-son, Rev. Joseph Howe, at Hartford. He was long remembered by his parishioners as a pious and excellent man, but is not known as an author.

He married, Nov. 21, 1754, Mrs. Damaris (Cady) Howe, the widow of his predecessor in office, and had two daughters, both of whom died young.

Mrs. Brown died in February, 1776.

Rev. EMERSON FOSTER was born about 1747, the son of Rev. Isaac Foster, who was ordained pastor in West Stafford, in 1764, became a Universalist in 1780, and died there, in 1807, having several sons, who ran a similar race. Emerson graduated D. C. 1773; preached in Granby, (Turkey Hills,) in 1774-5, and was invited to settle at Killingly, July 8, 1776, which call he declined, one-third of the Society being opposed to him. After inviting another candidate, who also declined, the people renewed their proposals to Mr. Foster, Sept. 11, 1777, a quarter of the Society still resisting. Mr. F. having accepted, the Council met, Jan. 21, 1778, and ordained him on the following day, notwithstanding the remonstrance of Dea. Ebenezer Learned and others, grounded on the divided state of the Society, and their dislike of Mr. Foster's doctrines. The sermon at the ordination was by Mr. Foster's father. The result of this settlement was an unhappy contention in the Killingly Church, which was not ended by the dismissal of Mr. Foster, July 27, 1779.

Mr. F. next preached, for a time, in New London, and was supplying there when the town was burnt by the British troops, in September, 1780; but early in 1782 removed to Orange, Ms., where he was installed on the 12th of December, over a Church newly formed. Of his ministry here, this report has been made: "His sentiments were unsound, his morals unexemplary, and his ministry unblest. His place has been since filled by Unitarians and Universalists."

Leaving Orange, in 1790, he preached in Clarendon and in Pomfret, Vt., and was, about 1800, settled as pastor at Orient, (in Southold,) L. I., which place he resigned in 1805, from ill health.

His last years were spent in Brooklyn, L. I., with a daughter, where he died in 1814, of a lingering illness, aged sixty-seven. No stone was erected at his grave, which is now covered by Sands Street Methodist Church.

He is remembered in Orient as a learned man, of good morals and grave manners, who wore a three-cornered hat, and could preach good sermons; but was feeble in body and addicted to opium. Reputed of doubtful orthodoxy, he was hopefully converted late in life. He married, Nov. 11, 1778, Margaret Foote, of Colchester, who died in Orient. He had three sons and three daughters, of whom only one daughter survived him.

Rev. ELISHA ATKINS was born at Middletown, Oct. 28, 1750, (New Style,) the son of Joel and Mary (Candee) Atkins, and grand-son of Benjamin Atkins, an early settler of Westfield Parish, Middletown. He was graduated Y. C. 1773; was soon licensed to preach, and attached to the Revolutionary army as a chaplain, employing himself, when off duty, in teaching.

He was called to settle at Killingly, March 2, 1784, and was ordained on the 3d of June following; sermon by Rev. Enoch Huntington, of Middletown. He remained sole pastor of the Church until 1832, and during these forty-eight years received two hundred and fifteen persons to the Church—thirty-eight of them in 1822, and seventy-eight in 1831. He had three colleagues successively associated with him before his death, which occurred June 14, 1839, at the age of nearly eighty-nine years. Within a year or two of his death, his sight had become much impaired; but his mental faculties remained in vigor, and he was followed to the grave by the veneration and love of his people. He was esteemed a good scholar and a handsome writer, and did much for education, especially in training pupils for College. He published a sermon, preached at the dedication of Killingly meeting-house, in 1818, one delivered before Putnam lodge of Freemasons, in 1821, and one preached at the funeral of Rev. Dr. Whitney, in 1824.

He married, in 1782, Mrs. Abigail (Candee) Eggleston, of Middletown, and had a son who died young, a daughter who married Gen. T. F. Carpenter, of Providence, R. I., and a son (Elisha) who became a Judge at Newport, R. I. Mrs. Atkins died in 1824, and Mr. A. married (2) Miss Lydia Dyke, of Thompson, in 1825.

Rev. WILLIAM BUSHNELL was born in Saybrook; was graduated Y. C. 1828, and studied theology at New Haven; was ordained colleague pastor with Rev. Elisha Atkins, of Killingly, Aug. 8, 1832, and dismissed by a Council of March 3, 1835, to take effect on the 8th of April following, during which time he received fifty persons to the communion. He was installed at Parsippany, N. J., Oct. 27, 1835; again at Beverly, Ms., Jan. 3, 1838, again at Newton, Ms., May 24, 1842; was afterward, for a time, Agent of the Seamen's Friend Society; was then engaged in some secular pursuits, and is now a Homœopathic physician, at No. 45 Harrison Avenue, Boston, Ms.

Mr. Bushnell published a sermon, preached in 1854, at the funeral of Hon. William Jackson, of Newton.

Rev. SIDNEY HOLMAN was born in Royalston, Ms., Jan. 5, 1800, the eldest son of Stephen and Hannah (Fuller) Holman, and descendant of Solomon Holman, who came from Wales. When about twenty-two years of age, he experienced a hopeful change. With limited means, he began a preparation for the ministry; was graduated W. C. 1830, and licensed, after a short course at Auburn, in October, 1831. He was ordained pastor at Saugus, Ms., Jan. 16, 1833, over a Mission Church of twelve members, from which he was dismissed, Dec. 31, 1834; was installed at North Killingly, (colleague with Mr. Atkins,) March 29, 1836, and thence dismissed, April 3, 1838. He was again settled, Oct. 31, 1838, over a new Church in Webster, Ms., where he remained only till April, 1840. He was once more settled July 8, 1840, over the Church in West Millbury, Ms., where he remained for eleven years. After his dismission from that charge, he lived for some years in his own house, in Millbury, preaching as he was called in God's providence, but has more recently been employed as a teacher in Holyoke, Ms.

He married, (1) Jan. 8, 1833, Myra, daughter of Thomas Fisher, Esq., of Templeton, Ms.; (2) Miss L. E. Griswold, of Orwell, Vt., and has children.

Of Rev. HENRY ROBINSON, a sketch may be found among the pastors of Plainfield, on page 293 of the second volume of this Quarterly.

Rev. JOHN D. BALDWIN was born Sept. 28, 1810, in North Stonington, a descendant of Thomas Baldwin, one of the original New Haven company. Having been a candidate for the Methodist ministry, but not feeling satisfied with their theological system, he went to New Haven, and studied theology in the Seminary there. Previous to this, he had prepared himself for College, and indeed pursued the studies of a College course to such an extent that he received from Yale College the honorary degree of A. M. He was ordained pastor in West Woodstock, Sept. 2, 1834, and dismissed July 25, 1837; was then installed at North Branford, Jan. 17, 1838, and dismissed about 1845; was once more settled in North Killingly, April 29, 1846, and dismissed Sept. 17, 1849; since which last date he has been employed mainly in conducting newspapers—first the Republican, at Hartford, and then the Commonwealth, at Boston.

Mr. Baldwin wrote several articles for the Christian Spectator, and published, about twelve years since, a volume of poems, from the press of Ticknor & Co.

He married Lemira, daughter of Capt. Ebenezer Hathaway, of Dighton, Ms., and has had sons and daughters.

The village around the Railroad Station in Putnam, was formerly known as Pomfret Depot, Wilkinsonville, or Quinebang, and embraced portions of the towns of Pomfret and Thompson. Public worship was maintained there for some time previous to the erection of a meeting-house and the formation of a Church. When the house was built, it was located within the bounds of Thompson; and the Church, organized July 9, 1848, was the second Congregational Church in that town.

This Church has had but one pastor, and since his dismissal has been supplied by Rev. Joseph R. Johnson, Rev. Eliakim Phelps, D.D., and others. The minister now in charge is Rev. George J. Tillotson, recently pastor of the Church in Brooklyn.

REV. ELIJAH BALDWIN HUNTINGTON was born in Bozrah, Aug. 14, 1816, the son of Dea. Nehemiah H., and Nancy (Leffingwell) Huntington, descendant of Simeon H., who came from England in 1639; was hopefully converted in 1830, entered Yale College in 1836, but left for lack of means; pursued College studies in private while teaching in various places in Eastern Connecticut; studied theology under direction of Rev. Dr. Bond, of Norwich; was licensed June, 1845, by New London Association; spent a year in distributing Bibles; in 1847 commenced preaching in two school-houses, in what is now Putnam; was ordained pastor of a recently formed Church, Nov. 8, 1848, and dismissed Feb. 25, 1851, on account of a bronchial difficulty; has since been Principal of the High School in Waterbury, and now in Stamford; has written for the press, especially as one of the editors of the Connecticut Common School Journal; has published several addresses on educational topics, and received, in 1850, the honorary degree of A. M. from Yale College.

CENTRAL CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, LAWRENCE, MS.

THE engraving opposite is quite a correct representation of the edifice of the Central Congregational Church in Lawrence, Ms. This was erected in place of one which was destroyed by fire on the 12th of August, 1859, and was dedicated June 8th, of the present year. In seven weeks after the former house was burned, and before its rubbish had been removed, the corner stone of the new one was laid, with appropriate services, on a beautiful site, facing the public Park. No work was ever prosecuted with greater energy and rapidity; and on the second Sabbath of January, public services, which for four months had been held in the City Hall, were commenced in the basement of the new building. This is entirely above ground, and is light, airy and attractive, as the basement of a church ought always to be. It consists of four large, contiguous rooms, furnished in an extremely neat and appropriate manner, and carpeted uniformly. There are entrances from the East and West sides of the church, as well as the front. The main room, called the Lecture Room, entered from the vestibule, is of a capacity to seat three hundred persons. The "Conference Room," which is connected in the rear by sliding doors of its entire width, with the Lecture Room, will accommodate one hundred and fifty. The "Study," as it is called, though not used especially by the pastor, except for personal interviews with his people and for small meetings, and the "Ladies' Room," open by sliding doors on the right and left of the Conference Room, and will each seat fifty persons. These rooms are used for Sabbath School purposes, prayer-meetings, &c., and the rear ones for social gatherings. One can hardly imagine an arrangement better adapted to the Sabbath School. The scholars of the Sabbath School proper—the infant class and the adult Bible classes—can all be brought together for any general exercise, with but a moment's delay, and then can be entirely separated.

The whole building is one of unusual taste, beauty and convenience. It is built of stone, and faces the South, with a tower at the South-east corner. The audience room is capable of seating a congregation of eight hundred,—a light gallery crossing the South end. The seats are black-walnut sofas, covered with drab damask. The pulpit, which is entered through a small room on the left communicating with the Study, is of black walnut, and so small as to interpose no barrier between the minister and those whom he wishes to reach. On the right of it, is the recess for the Organ.

That which strikes one most forcibly on entering, is the perfect symmetry of every part. Even the carpet harmonizes, in shade, with the pews; and the beams across the vaulted roof, and the delicately stained glass of the windows, are of a hue that beautifully corresponds with all. There is nothing overdone or out of taste, and it has become a common remark of strangers that there is nothing calculated to distract the pious worshiper, who comes in to commune with his own heart and with his God. In less than two months after its dedication, every seat in the house was taken, and it became necessary to add several new pews. The history of the "Central Congregational Church" is full of encouragement to faith in God. It was organized only eleven years since, with but thirty-two members. Its present number is 450, of whom more than half have been added during the last three years. While death and removals have at different times deprived it of many who were looked upon as pillars, yet God has graciously brought in others to supply their places, so that its advancement has been quite uniform. The loss of their church edifice by fire, was a trial that older and stronger churches can hardly appreciate, and this new one has been built only by the most strenuous and self-denying efforts.

There have been two pastors to the Church. Rev. Wm. C. Foster, (now settled in North Becket,) who was installed Jan. 16th, 1852, and sustained the relation, amid labors most abundant, until Feb. 17th, 1857; and the present pastor, (Rev. Daniel Tenney,) who was installed Sept. 2d, 1857.

NEW ENGLAND IN THE WEST.

BY REV. JOSEPH S. CLARK, D.D.

IN the preface to Robert Cushman's lay-sermon, preached to the Mayflower company, in the spring after their arrival at Plymouth—the first New England sermon ever printed—he tells his “loving friends” at home, with an evident aim to show up the roominess of the place, that “so far as we can find, it is an island, and near about the quantity of England.” In the early years of Boston, a committee, appointed to lay out a road westward from the Neck, having made a survey about ten miles to a rough region, now known as Newton Lower Falls, reported that they had gone as far as travel was likely to extend in that direction. They were both mistaken. Instead of a little island of 122,000 square miles, which is about the measurement of Great Britain, that pilgrim band were settling a country which now measures 3,000,000 square miles, and their descendants have already got considerably farther west than Newton. Indeed, Western emigration has become one of their prominent characteristics. A Yankee hardly thinks of moving in any other direction. In early times, it is true, New Englanders went to Virginia, and Virginians came to New England. On one occasion Winthrop tells us (see his Journal, vol. ii. p. 77,) that an appeal came “from many well-disposed people of the upper new farms in Virginia, to the elders here, bewailing their sad condition, for want of the means of salvation, and earnestly entreating a supply of faithful ministers, whom, upon experience of their gifts and godliness, they might call to office,”—very much as such appeals now come from Minnesota;—and three ministers were sent to their relief, as they are now continually being sent to the valley of the Mississippi. The result, however, was not favorable to the continuance of this fraternal intercourse between the North and South. Episcopacy being the only form of worship then tolerated in that colony, the preaching of these Congregational ministers was at first restricted to private houses, and finally forbidden altogether; so that, after a trial of two years, they returned, and were followed by a portion of their congregations, whose worthy descendants of the fourth and fifth generations are with us still. But no hindrance, save the hardships of a frontier life, which never keep a real Yankee at home, has restrained his westward proclivities. Whether induced with a natural appetency, like a bean-vine, to follow the sun, or attracted by “the star of empire,” which he is among the first to discover, it is certain that the New Englander has a strong westward penchant, which bids fair to New Englandize a breadth of some six or seven degrees, quite across the continent.

The following facts, derived chiefly from the United States census of 1850, will show, not only the process through which this result is coming to pass, but also the surprising rapidity of its development. The six Northwestern States of Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa and Wisconsin (Minnesota, at the taking of that census, was a territory of only 6,077 souls) had an aggregate of 4,715,474; of which only 41 per cent. were natives of the State in which they lived; and of the 2,815,837 that were born elsewhere, not less than 45 per cent. were either natives of New England, or of the States largely settled by New England emigrants. For example: Western New York was peopled, to a great extent, from New England, and Ohio from Western New York, and States still farther West and North from Ohio; so that we do not get a complete view of the New England element in Michigan, for instance, unless we take into account that part of the population which came directly from Ohio, and whose fathers came from Western New York, as theirs also did from Connecticut and Massachusetts. An estimate that should include all these, we have no doubt, would show a larger emigration into the seven Northwestern States from New England, than from all the rest of the world. The census returns for 1860, though not yet complete, show a population, in these seven States, of at least 8,000,000. Supposing the same ratio of nativities as in the census of 1850, there are no less than 2,360,000 souls of New England extraction now living in those Northwestern States—a number nearly as large as the entire population of New England when the last census was taken.

These statistics are profoundly suggestive. New England is either losing or gaining, in relative rank and influence, at a rapid rate. Her sons and daughters are either getting absorbed and giving up their birthright characteristics, or else they are founding another New England towards the setting sun. An observant traveller over that region is not long in finding out that the truth lies with the last of these suppositions. This remark is based on our own personal observations during an extended tour through all the Western States and Territories sixteen years ago, which was retraced in great part, on a health excursion, last summer, with ample leisure for reflection upon whatever facts and phases came under our notice.

The first New England feature that attracts the notice of such a traveler in the West, is the style of architecture and husbandry that meets his eye. A mere roadside view is enough. That snug white cottage, with green Venetian blinds, in which, no doubt, lives the owner of this lately cleared farm, surrounded and interlaced by many a furlong of post-and-rail fence, cannot be mistaken for any other than the new home of a Yankee. Passing through Ohio in a stage coach, before that great State was covered, as now, with a web of rail-roads, we became so confident of a correct guess, in every instance, that we challenged the driver, who seemed to know everybody on the road, and had business with a large part of them, to detect us in an error, if he could. A fellow passenger, sitting directly behind us, who had not before spoken, was moved by our remarks to say that he would show us something by-and-by, which would "take the shine all off from these Yankee clearings." It was spoken in a brogue which needed not the explanatory observation of his wife, ("My husband thinks nothing can beat the Dutch,") to foreshadow the style of farming life that we were about to see. And, sure enough, we were already in sight of a monster barn, in the shadow of which stood a small and oddly shaped dwelling-house, surrounded by almost interminable acres of corn and wheat, which seemed, as all Dutch farms do, to have been cleared when the world was made, and to have been under good culture nearly ever since. "No Yankee lives there," said our taciturn friend on the back seat, with evident satisfaction. "You are undoubtedly right," we replied; and pointing at the same time to a woman near the roadside, hoeing corn, we added, "she, at least, is no Yankee." A spectacle in such awkward contrast with so much natural beauty and agricultural taste, needed some apology, which was frankly supplied by the Dutchman's allusion to the "old country," from which that outlandish fashion was imported.

And this suggests that the social customs and manners of New England are everywhere found in the West. These are often so modified and intermixed with importations from other quarters, as to seem almost a caricature; but he whose memory can reach back forty or fifty years, will find the ground form, as etymologists call it, in some New Englandism of that date. Those who have read Mrs. Kirkland's "New Home; Who'll Follow?"—a graphic description of everyday life in Michigan twenty-five years ago—will need no other illustration of this topic in respect to the coarser and more homely developments of character. But the same thing is equally true in regard to its nicer shades. While the representative of every section of our country, and of every country in Christendom, is contributing somewhat of his own personal type and nationality to mold the forming mass, the Yankee, unless greatly outnumbered, soon overmasters all others in fixing a New England stamp on the social life as it approximates towards a homogeneous type around him. A Vermonter, who has been accustomed from his boyhood to work twelve hours a day, and six days in a week, and go to meeting twice every Sabbath, moves to Illinois, where he meets one from the sunny South, whose day has seldom had more than eight working hours, and his week, on an average, four working days, and the Sabbath one religious service. Their farms lie side by side on the prairie. Now, the chances are two to one that the Vermonter will not only stick to his New England habits, but will also give a jog to his neighbor from the South. His wife and children will do the same in their respective departments. The two families will at length find themselves moving on together in a life-current, not exactly the same that either was in when they first met, but both of them many points nearer the New England course of life than any other.

In close connection with this fact, an observant traveler will notice another, viz.: that New England intellect and enterprise are largely concerned in whatever stirring events are transpiring in the West, whether secular or religious, whether good or bad. Scarcely a railroad of any magnitude that was not built, to a great extent, by New England capital, under a Yankee superintendent or engineer, with a Yankee director, visible or invisible, at the head of its present management. Scarcely a manufacturing establishment, on a large and lucrative scale, whether of friction matches or mowing machines, whether of patent medicines or rye whisky, that was not started by a Yankee. The builders alike of hospitals, and mammoth hotels; the founders of benevolent institutions, and moral reform societies; the originators of strange systems of religion, and infidel clubs; when inquired for in the West, are very likely to be of New England parentage. Not only Christian philanthropists, whose names will be fragrant through all coming time, have been borne hence on the tide of Western emigration, but those also, it is painful to add, whose memories are destined to rot. Joe Smith, the Mormon, went from Vermont, and Abner Kneeland, the atheist, from Boston.

But in nothing does New England appear to be more completely reproduced throughout the North-west than in her religious and educational features. This has resulted, in great part, from the Home Missionary spirit that sprung up in the East simultaneously with the first removals of her sons and daughters to the West. The early emigrants were remarkable for their orderly, church-going habits. To live without the sanctuary and the schoolhouse was a privation which they had never suffered, and to which they were by no means disposed to submit. What they could not do themselves in meeting these demands, was often done by a circle of friends in the community, the parish, the Church from which they came into the wilderness, before a Home Missionary Society was known. Among the recollections of childhood, we have distinctly in mind the scene of a religious meeting at a private dwelling in our native parish, on a summer Sabbath evening,—a farewell service with the family, whose large covered wagon, all packed in the barn, was to take them the next morning on their long, long road to Ohio. The minister preached a sermon suited to the occasion, in which was faithfully pointed out the duties of a Christian family in a new settlement. The head of the family was advised to officiate as priest in his own house and invite his neighbors (when he had any) to join him, on the Sabbath, in prayer and praise and the reading of a sermon or in religious conference, till at some distant day—Western villages did not then spring up in a night—they might once more enjoy the sanctuary privileges they were leaving behind. From a member of that family, then a child like ourself, but now the pastor of a Congregational church in Ohio, we learn that such advice was not forgotten. After a tedious journey of six weeks (which can now be performed in less than two days) they arrived at their new home, and found themselves ten miles from the nearest place of worship. On their first Sabbath in the wilderness, the father instituted public worship in his log cabin, which he constantly kept up till relieved by a Home Missionary. The result is, that on the tract of land taken up by him and his brother, who joined him the year following, there are now four Evangelical churches, with an aggregate membership of four hundred, and as many scholars in their Sabbath Schools. All the leading enterprises of Christian benevolence that are sustained in New England, are vigorously sustained there, and with a progressive spirit that has already outrun the old mother Church in the East, from which they originally took pattern.

This is not an episode. Through this one loop-hole we have a peep at the whole North-west, as that term was understood forty-five years ago, when the line of frontier settlements was crossing Ohio. Just such families were all the while moving into just such wilderness spots, and the results might be reported in nearly the same words. Churches have sprung up, of the Puritan faith, though, for reasons that might be easily given, not always of the ecclesiastical form in which they were trained. The Presbyterians alone have derived about two thousand of their churches from New England Congregationalists, mostly in the Middle and Western States, through the workings of an old, and now defunct "Plan of Union." Other denominations have gleaned, not handfuls, but heavy sheaves, on the same field. But aside from all these, there are now found in the seven North-western States 971 Congregational churches, numbering 55,415 members, increasing faster than at any former time, if not faster than any other denomination. Of the thousands of Home Missionaries whose voices have been heard, like John the Baptist's "crying in the wilderness: Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God," much the largest number have gone from New England, and a still larger proportion of their missionary support has been derived from the same quarter.

Nor has the influence of New England been less effective on the educational, than on the religious and ecclesiastical destinies of the West. As the meeting-house, the school house, and the college sprung up together in the earliest settlements of the Puritans here, so have they been transplanted together in the new settlements of their descendants there. And it is worthy of a passing notice that both here and there, the ministers of religion have led the way in matters of education. In the seven States already named are to be found seven Colleges and two or three Theological Seminaries, as distinctively New England in their origin, officers and early endowments, as Old Harvard, or Yale, or Dartmouth; and like these ancient seats of learning, they were founded in a wilderness. Before the people were out of log cabins, their ministers, nine tenths of whom were home missionaries with families to feed and clothe out of salaries not exceeding $400, were heading subscription papers, selecting trustees, and calling on their friends in the East to help them put up college buildings on sites already set apart by prayer. These seven Colleges and two or three Theological Seminaries, and almost any number of Academies and Female Institutes which have not yet outgrown their reliance on Eastern sympathy, together with a system of common schools copied mainly from our own, have given a New England stamp to the West which cannot be mistaken, and which will never be effaced. That stamp will be more indelible as the die sinks deeper and deeper in the coming years, under the action of these mighty agencies—the social, the religious, the educational—till another New England, and another, at shorter and shorter intervals of time, shall be reproduced all the way from Plymouth Rock to the mouth of the Columbia river. Even then the longitudinal dimensions of New England will not outstretch the limits assigned them in the "Great Patent" issued by King James I. in 1620, viz., "in length, by all the breadth aforesaid, throughout the main land, from sea to sea," i. e. from the Atlantic to the Pacific; which great patent, Baylies tells us, (Historical Memoir of Plymouth, vol. I, page 196,) "is the foundation of all the titles to land in New England."

Let it not be supposed, however, that New England has received no equivalent for the good influence she has exerted on the West. Much might be said of the influence, perhaps equally good and great, which the West has exerted on New England. The very drafts that have been made on her sympathy in response to appeals from that quarter, coming to us from our "kindred according to the flesh," have served to strengthen those kindred ties. And who can overrate the worth of such ties, considered merely in a patriotic point of view, aside from all personal considerations? Suppose the same bands of brotherhood to have joined the North and the South from their early years; how nonsensical to everybody would seem this talk about dissolving the Union! how fratricidal any act that could be construed into the attempt at such a thing!

Moreover, the conservatism of New England has been happily tempered by its connection with the more radical and progressive spirit of the West. This is equally true in cases which awakened resentment at the time. An active stimulant may be none the less, but all the more, needful, as a remedial agent, when the patient has sunk into such a torpid state as to wish not to be roused. It is no very gracious operation, in itself considered, to wring the nose of a fellow being; yet the Russian, in his hyperborean winter, cannot do a more friendly deed for his neighbor, when he sees, what the owner does not, the insidious frost of a still morning creeping over that organ. A slight peevishness has sometimes been exchanged between the East and the West; but while New England has checked the West in its John Gilpin speed, the West has jogged the East in her slow-coach pace. And who shall say which has been the most benefited by these reciprocal checks and stimulants?

For an illustration, take the Congregational Church polity as administered in New England, and at the West, some twenty-five or thirty years ago. Here, while the old Puritan principles of the system were theoretically held, the system itself, in practice, was shrivelled into scarcely more than a string of precedents, some of which were of modern, and some of ancient date, and all of them at the farthest remove from any thing in the shape of reasons. Ministers rarely alluded to the subject—almost never in the pulpit—and not one in a hundred of the people dreamed that the “power of the keyes” was committed to them. Even the students in our Theological Seminaries were left untaught, or (still worse,) taught to be Presbyterian, Episcopalian, or—any thing, in the Ecclesiastical line, which others around them might happen to be. There, whatever Congregational churches had not been Presbyterianized by the plan of Union, had got well nigh elbowed off to Brownism, in their repugnance to that union, and could barely brook the restraints imposed by Christian fellowship. Here, the prelatie element was continually gaining ascendancy. There, the democratic principle was growing more and more rampant. Rumors of irregularities, disorders, heresies among Western Congregationalists, were brought to our ears by Presbyterians, coming to receive our benefactions and benedictions as the only true representatives of New England in the West; and reports were carried back of distrust and disfellowship, on the part of Eastern Congregationalists towards those in the West. By reason of these rumors and reports, every where heard and generally believed, there was aroused a spirit of inquiry, not only into the grounds of these charges, but into Congregationalism itself, and the way of administering it, at the East as well as the West, which has resulted in rectifying many irregularities,—perhaps as many here as there. The Albany Convention, which grew directly from that awakened spirit of inquiry, revealed at once the cause and the cure of these discrepancies between the East and the West. The freer intercourse that has since been held with one another; their fuller understanding of each other's views; and, more than all, their better acquaintance with the fundamental principles of their own Church polity—these more recent facts which are finding a development through the Congregational Library Association at Boston, and the American Congregational Union at New York, and this Congregational Quarterly, carrying forth, as it does, the salutations of both these bodies to the remotest dwellers in the land, and placing each subscriber in communion with every other, are rapidly bringing the Congregationalists of every section and type into harmony, not with one another merely, but with the Fathers also. What our Presbyterian brethren have been wont to complain of as the “irregularities,” “disorders,” &c., of our Church polity, are no longer confined to the West; they are charged upon the East, as well; and may now be taken to mean, that Congregationalism, freeing itself from all other superincumbent isms, is becoming once more itself—what it was in its best days, before it had stiffened into prelatie conservatism on the one hand, or relaxed into democratic radicalism on the other. And for this improved and more primitive state of things throughout the denomination, we are in no small degree indebted to our brethren in the West, whose surroundings created a necessity for inquiring after the “old paths,” which our situation was not likely to reveal till we had gone still farther astray.

But perhaps the most important, certainly the most remarkable advantage derived to New England from her Western relations, is found in the quickening, energizing power, exerted on her sons and daughters who are peopling those forests and prairies. It is no novelty for human character to undergo a change, by merely changing the place of residence. The green, untraveled youth, who, with all his earthly effects in a pedestrian's pack, travels on foot from New Hampshire to Boston, or from Connecticut to New York, to “seek his fortune,” amid the new and stirring scenes of city life oftener than not expands into a style of manhood which he never would have reached in his native home. The prominent merchants and professional men in both these cities have grown from such beginnings, under such influences; and in either place mercantile and professional life would soon stagnate, were it not replenished from the same source. Now this is precisely the idea that is constantly developing, only on a vastly larger scale, among the youthful New England emigrants, of both sexes, who are pouring into the Great West.

We have already alluded to the Yankee intellect and enterprise as a mighty influence which New England is putting forth in that direction. We now speak of it as an influence exerted on New England's own sons and daughters by the almost creative power which Western life has, in forming such characters out of the raw material as it comes to hand. One is often amused in traveling there, to meet with a distinguished lawyer or politician, perhaps a judge or Congressman, produced (and no sham production either) from what was known in some district school at the East as merely a tonguey lad, or at best, a college boy, endowed with some little native brass, it may be, but foreshowing no more distinction in the world than forty-nine others in his class of fifty. A physician who now stands confessedly at the head of the faculty in one of the largest cities of the West, went there some twenty years ago, without friends, without even a college diploma to recommend him — merely a tall, green Yankee, who had thoroughly read medicine, and could read men. He, and his friends and his native New England, owe his expansion and elevation to the formative power of the West. In the same city, where it was our lot to preach half a day for a brother minister and college mate (a distinguished D. D., by the way, whose distinction had all been acquired after he came out there) in answer to questions artlessly asked respecting the general habits of the congregation, as hearers of the Word, we were told the story of a lawyer in his flock, who was so very exacting, and had such a lofty standard of pulpit excellence, that he had become a terror, not to "evil doers" merely, but to all who could not do extremely well. And so quick was his perception of any defect, that, in nine cases out of ten, he could tell, or thought he could, by the way in which the preacher read his first hymn, or a chapter in the Bible at the opening of the service, whether he was fit to preach; and if not, he, the lawyer, did not feel bound to keep awake, and had often been known to show other less equivocal signs of disgust. It was impossible, after hearing all this, not to feel annoyed at the thought of preaching, in such a presence. We bethought us of David, with his five smooth stones and sling going to meet a giant whose spear was like a "weaver's beam"; but could hardly be solaced with the hope, that, like him, we possessed a missile that would penetrate either his head or heart. We remembered to have once preached to Daniel Webster, and found him an attentive hearer; but then, while we could not question his intellectual equality with this "second Daniel come to judgment," it was remembered that he of Marshfield was proverbially indulgent in his criticisms on ministers — which thing it was clear, from the pastor's showing, was not the habit of this formidable personage. Several times during the sermon, and in several different pews, imagination saw the man: for neither his name, nativity, nor place in church was told us. On leaving the pulpit we were accosted by a young man, remembered as a student in Monson Academy, some ten years previous, when we had the honor of serving on the Board of Trustees. To our utter surprise, it afterwards appeared that this was none other than that same "Goliath of Gath" — grown to this stature from that Academy boy since he came into the West. In another locality — a rising young city — we found in almost every body's mouth the name of a certain individual of remarkably shrewd business tact, of large enterprise, and the owner of an immense landed estate, with any number of tenants and employees at his control. He had built an eighty-thousand-dollar hotel in the young city of his adoption, at which he boarded. We, too, had taken lodgings at the same house. Judge of our astonishment, when the dinner hour came, to find this Western nabob at our elbow, the identical person whom we had known in one of the obscurest towns of Eastern Massachusetts, himself an obscure youngster, with no more promise than scores of others in that place, who, in continued obscurity, —

"Along the cool sequestered vale of life
Have passed the even tenor of their way."

These are given as specimens. Each is the representative of a class. Other classes might be represented as well; but there is no need of it. The great fact underlying them all is sufficiently apparent, viz.: that, from some cause or other there is a quickening, energizing, expanding effect produced in the West, on the general manhood of those who come there from the East. What is it? Can it be pointed out, or defined? It is the theory of some, we know, that these phenomena can be accounted for on the principle that only the most active and enterprising go from home; that it is not so much the West that expands their manhood, as it is their expanding manhood that carries them there. But this is a mere begging of the question; for it is a part of the phenomena themselves, that there is no perceptible difference in this respect between those who go, and those who stay at home, till after they have gone.

A more plausible theory is suggested by the following extracts from a cousinly correspondence with one who had been in the West long enough to learn its peculiarities, but not long enough to forget the first impressions they made on him. "I like the West. Every thing in nature out here is projected on a grand scale; the rivers are long, the prairies wide, the distances great. Business, too, is laid out on the same scale; a single farm sometimes will contain a thousand acres, and one corn or wheat field a hundred, — with cattle, horses and hogs to match. Even the human faculties seem to acquire a corresponding amplitude — perhaps by converse with so much surrounding greatness. I have not yet ceased to wonder at the magnificence — yes, that's the word — which attaches to every thing here. Truly this is a great country." It did not become the writer to say, what we now feel warranted in saying, that he was, himself, an illustration of his own remark on the enlargement which the human faculties undergo, when brought in contact with so much surrounding greatness. And may it not be accepted as a general truth, that great objects and aims beget greater ideas in those who are conversant with them, than lesser objects and lower aims! — thereby making a person more of a man, than he would otherwise become? For example; a friend at whose house we stopped in one of the river towns of Iowa, accompanied us to the landing on leaving his house. Just as the boat was starting, we gave him the parting hand, expressing, at the same time, a wish that he was going with us. After a moment's reflection, he said, "I have a few hundred sheep up the river which I have not seen for some time, and can as well go now as ever"; then, turning to his little boy who came with us, "Tell your mother I'm back to-morrow," — and the boat was off. It was a hundred and fifty miles to his sheep-pasture; and on our way there, the fact was learned that he had a larger flock, farther off, in another direction, besides the spacious fields of wheat that we had seen just out of the village. Now, in exchanging the little barren patch of ground among the hills of Berkshire, in Massachusetts, where he was pent up all the early part of his life, for this wide range of agricultural enterprise, was there not a natural and almost necessary enlargement of the man himself, in all those faculties which properly constitute manhood? If so, it will go far towards accounting for those growths which Yankees get on going West.

And who can estimate the advantage that New England is all the time reaping from her connection with the West, through the mighty influence thus exerted on her sons and daughters? The scope thereby given to their native powers, which would not else be developed; the benefit accruing directly to such as emigrate; and that which indirectly comes to the dwellers at home, like a reflux wave, bringing a fresher tide of life around them — these several advantages, with others, inseparable from them, are an ample remuneration for all the kindness that New England has shown the West. Let that kindness continue. "Men will praise thee when thou doest well for thyself."

A LESSON FROM THE PAST :

HOW THE FATHERS TOOK UP MORAL REFORMS.

BY REV. JOSEPH S. CLARK, D.D.

THE following document in its original draft, (with a chirography so cramped and close as to defy any common eyes to read it,) was furnished for the Quarterly by Rev. William C. Fowler, of Durham, Ct., who has before contributed to the manuscript collections of the Congregational Library Association from his valuable store of the Chauncy papers, and will do so again—we hope. In speaking of the revival spirit of the fathers in our last issue (Vol. II. pp. 404-8) as "A Lesson from the Past," we had occasion to notice the "Reforming Synod" of 1679, as a means of many conversions, and also an important step in the recovering of New England churches from a declension of spiritual life. This paper sheds additional light on that period in our religious history, of which scarcely a record remains, except Cotton Mather's account in the Magnalia, and a few sermons preached at the renewal of covenants in some of the churches. It appears, from his account, that the Plymouth and Connecticut colonies shared, to some extent, in the revival that followed the meeting of Synod, though no mention is made of any preliminary steps on the part of either, except a simultaneous fast in November of the year preceding. But from the date of this document, it is clear that Connecticut had been moving in that direction for at least three years; while from the subject matter of the writing, it is equally clear that the movement was deep and strong. The minute details become less tedious than impressive, resulting, as they evidently do, from a heart-earnest sincerity. When shall we again see such a frank and fearless exposure of prevailing sins? When will our moral reforms be taken up in a way so hopeful, because so scriptural? When will Christians be as quick to

"—— see a God employed

In all the good and ill that checker life?"

Care has been taken to preserve the original orthography, punctuation and division of topics, together with the frequent abbreviations. A few words have been added [in brackets] where, through accidental omission, or obscure phraseology, the sense is not otherwise clear. Scarcity of paper is the generally assigned cause for the fine and contracted hand-writing of the fathers; but a page and a half of blank, on the single sheet of not large foolscap containing this entire document, is evidence to the contrary. Perhaps the manual labor of writing was a burden to them, as with their written characters it would be to us, and they sought alleviation in this way. But how they ever preached from such notes—there's the puzzle!

ATT A MEETING OF Y^e COUNCIL HELD AT HARTFORD, MARCH 7th, 1675-6:

The Council finding themselves prest under an awakening of God's high displeasure ag^t y^e Country, manifested both in some late lesser strokes of his hand, & now in the Awful Judgement of a wasting war, by the Hand of Barbarous Heathen, threatening Desolation (if y^e Lord prevent not), do see Cause to Recommend unto People Inhabiting wthin the Precincts of this Colony of Connecticut the following Collection & Advertizement respecting such sins & evils of Provocation as are found or feared to Prevail amongst us to invert y^e Course of God's former gracious dispensations towards us and cause him to app^r in Anger as a holy, just & Jealous God ag^t us, who being omnipresent tries & sees o^r hearts & ways to be degenerate & can no longer endure to Behold Iniquity in o^r Jacob, nor such Transgression^s in o^r Israel wthout bearing witness ag^t the same, & y^t wth the same severity wh is not only now felt but may be farther expected, unless we timely Prepare to meet him wth sincerity of Repentance & Reformation by y^e help of Jes: implored.

Wherefore, in Pursuance of what is above-mentioned, it is agreed & ordered that y^e 22^d day of this Instant be kept throughout this Colony a Day of Public fasting and Prayer (at wh time this writing shall be Read in y^e sev^l Congregations of y^e Colony) to endeavor the working y^e deep sense of the sins and things Contained in this writing upon the People wth such exhortations & scripture Arguments for y^e begetting an heart & life Reformation Universally as God shall help, beseeching the God of all Grace (in his Infinite Compassion) to help, accept, and give a blessing, & to heal o^r Land by granting deliverance & Holiness together.

It is well known to all y^t will in any Measure concern themselves to be Acquainted [with] those things y^t w^r done not very long agoe, Upon wh^t Grounds, & in what manner, & wth w^t remarkable dispensations of y^e hand of God, the foundations of this wilderness w^r laid. We may assuredly say (sparing the mention of other things considerable) the great Business y^t lay at y^e hearts of the undertakers was to keep up the Power of Religion, in the closest and choicest Parts of it, & to leave their Posterity under y^e Converting Influence of all Christ's Institutions, tho' in worldly respects upon terms of no small Disadvantage. And while y^e first Love of so good a design was warmly kept up, God answered y^e sincerity of y^r hearts with Solomon's blessing, keeping up Outward mercy together wth y^t saving wisdom.

But forasmuch as it hath pleased o^r Holy & Jealous God of latter years to begin to change his hand towards us, & by a Course of Lesser Judgements to manifest y^t y^r was something very much amiss among us, and after non attendance to y^e Voice of such Rodds, hath at last given Commission to the Devouring sword to pass through o^r Land, so that we se o^r Garments now Rowling in Blood, & o^r ears are reached wth y^e Groans of so many wounded & dying men. These things considered, we have thought it high Time to humble o^rselves under the mighty hand of God, so to search into the Causes of Provocation, & to set o^rselves to y^e utmost to Reform w^t is amiss among us, that, if it may be, the Lord may return to us and own us as in days of old.

First, therefore, we cannot but observe, and call upon every man to take notice of in himself, that wh we have reason to believe is our FUNDAMENTAL WOUND, & lyes at y^e Bottom of all o^r sins & sorrows, viz. that Gen^l Apostacy y^t is found among us, Men insensibly loosing and letting goe the warmth and Heat and Head of Religion. And tho' we have yet, thro' Grace, many godly ones (Sons & Daughters of Zion) among us, yet even o^r Gold is become dim & too much of it is Drossy. This Backsliding we are persuaded men cannot hide from y^r own eyes, tho' a subtil and undermining Malady, if they will consider,

1. The poor, dry, Lazy work (if any at all) that is done in their Closets. How common is Habitual neglect of Meditation and heart searching, wth an easy contentedness under lasting wth drawls of y^e Life-presence of God in Christ!

2. As also how Lamentably family worship is carried on in formal, perfunctory, empty Prayers, seldom reading y^e word of God, Little done for instructing of Children and servants & helping their souls towards Heaven; And well if all, in too many families, be not totally neglected.

3. Yet further, those Declensions appear in the almost Quite Laying down, or very Backward & thin attending upon Christian Conferences, Men not allowing themselves time to discourse and Pray together about y^e things of y^e Kingdom, & manifesting y^r great abatements of y^e fear of God by not speaking one to another.

4. We may not here pass by another evil of near agreement wth y^t last mentioned, viz., the wearing out of Private fastings, at least in too great a measure, wh as they have been in former years much and closely followed, so they have been found by exp^t of Serious Christians, both in Old England and New, to have a Peculiar Quickening, Edifying, Seasoning Tendency, & to help forward close Communion wth God and among his Saint.

5. And when the Ruines ly so Apparent in the more Private Management of Religion, we can^t expect to find it any better in the Public, but y^t o^r Sabbaths, and other extraordinary dayes, carry upon them the visible marks of this apostacy, Solemnity of Preparation being in a mann^r lost, Laziness taking hold of men in Private, so y^t y^e word of God is neither Read nor Repeated in familiys, and sleepy sottishness in Publick, so that they have not, nor mind w^t is delivered, Many in the mean time taking more Liberty for worldly business and discourse than Rule will allow, or God bear with All wh things laid together, as they manifest how much is lost of y^t Primitive Spirit y^t was formerly found among us, so must they needs Produce great estrangement from God, slightness and formality in Profession, Emptiness and Barrenness wh too much abound among us.

Secondly. As this is y^e case of those y^t have been in any measure conversant wth y^e things of Jes: X in y^r Souls, some in a greater, some in a lesser Degree, so are there others, and those a great Number, especially of y^e younger Generation, yea & too many of those whose Parents have done and suffered, Prayed and wept for y^e salⁿ of their children y^t do live in Palpable and Notorious negglect of y^e grace of y^e Gospell, who tho' they are ur^uer y^e continual Preaching of y^e word, yet behave themselves wth y^t disregard and unconcernedness about w^t they hear, as if they did not believe y^r w^r a God in y^e world, or they had souls to save, or an Eternity ere long to enter into. And tho' there be cause of thanksgiving y^t there hath been so much hopeful converting work amongst us, yet y^r are too many persons evidently unregenerate and not looking after their New birth, that are to be found in all o^r Plantations, who give cause sadly to say y^t we are Quickly turned out of y^e way of y^e God of o^r fathers.

Thirdly. There is yet a sort among us who being not wholly strangers from y^e operations of y^e Spirit of Grace upon y^r souls, yet either for want of good counsel, or well following y^t wh is given them, by one means or other do over hastily take up an opinion of y^r good estate, and so put themselves upon y^e Ordinances and Privileges of y^e Gospell. In the bare enjoyment of knowing y^e true end and use of them, they sit down quietly, never seeking Communion with God, or growth or edification to their own souls. And hence it comes to pass that after some time they either wither away to Nothing, or grow Proud & wanton and Opinionative; while some on y^e other hand err in the contrary extreme, who being charitably fitted to walk with the Lord Jes: in his own wayes, yet by Reason of Prejudice unduly taken up, or Modesty hurtful to themselves, or Carelessness and unjustifiable neggligence, do keep at a distance from the Sanctuary, and Loose the Precious [benefits?] wh they might there enjoy.

Fourthly. As thus men have found out Various Inventions to estrange themselves from God, so have they by Proportionable Methods turned themselves to y^e world, and given to it that love and Zeal and Diligence that is due to God alone; wh evil is the more Odious because so Manifestly contrary to those Principles y^t were embraced by y^e first Undertakers, who, as they had low expectations, so did they prepare themselves with Answerable Mortifying Resolutions, and thought it was enough if they might find what they first sought, even the Kingdom of God. But men have generally so found y^e way to y^e world, y^t first under pretence of necessity, and then from the sweetness wh has stolen their hearts, it has eat up y^r spirits and is become y^e Idol of New England, wh neither y^e witness of former lesser Judgements, nor present threatenings of y^e sword, have been able hitherto to throw down.

Fifthly. From this Apostacy mentioned, turning [men] from holiness to the world, have sprang up many gross moral scandalous evils, as branches from this root, some of y^e principle of wh we shall mention.

1. Shameful ignorance, while many Persons neglecting and despising the offers of Grace, are justly left to y^t sottishness y^t yy mind not y^e very common Principles of Religion, nor are able to give any Tolerable acc^t of y^m. And too many train up y^r children in y^e same manner, not sticking to remove them: or theirs to distant corners for worldly advantage, as incapacitates y^m for y^e settled enjoyment of Ordinances, — as if it were their designe to entail brutish Ignorance to future Generations. Others in y^e mean time there are who, tho' yy cannot be taxed for Ignorance, yet are guilty of another great Evil, viz., Abusing Light and Knowledge. Such men indeed take some Pains to furnish their heads, and understandings; but when they have done, make use of y^r Light for Pride and Ostentation, or craftily to oppose y^e Power of Godliness, or find out shifts to strengthen themselves in Sin, and Dodge those that reprove them.

2. Profaneness, not only in wantonizing with Light, but likewise abusing y^e holy things of God in vain, scurrilous or deriding manner; and especially we have cause to witness against y^e Profanation of y^e Sabbath in many respects, some of wh have been before intimated, and we may further add, that wh creeps in too generally among us, careless incroaching upon the Day in pursuit of Common Occasions in y^e beginning and end of it; And indeed a sadly Universal falling short of y^t blessed Rule. 58 Is. 13. And we must not pass by y^t wh is assuredly a cause of profang y^e Sabbath, viz., rude meetings after the Day in y^e evening wh is a fit season to warm y^e truths laid upon y^e heart, by meditation & Prayer, wh is not only lost, but run out in an increase of vanity.

3. Gen: and notorious Defects in Relative dutys. Superiors betray their authority, by not maintaining y^e Dignity & weight of the Place yy are betruusted with. Tho' o^r Aim be not to give countenance to y^e Contra: extreme of harshness w^h y^r is danger of it, inferiors are contemning authority, Civil, Eccl: and Domestic; and y^eby rudeness of behavior, sauciness of word, Licentious Liberty of young persons, & undoing idleness do break in as a flood upon us.

4. A contentious, quarrelsome spirit appears — an easy taking up offences upon slight occasions, and hardly laying y^m down. And with this unforgiving there goeth also an unreflecting frame, men having little sense of y^e Sin in so doing, at least, of y^r own Sin, and laying y^e blame upon each other, wth much and very unsuitable self-Justification. The spirit of this Distemper lys in y^e pride of heart wh makes men over value themselves & envy others, together wth y^e wretched abounding of self love. And its evil so much y^e worse amongst us, y^t it does not only show itself in Civil [affairs] but in relig: also — so as to make disunions in Church and factions in Religion.

5. A spirit of sensuality manifesting itself, not only by goeing to y^e outside of liberty in y^e use of Lawful things, wh is always dangerous, but breaking over into a palpable and boundless gratification of Lust. So y^t uncleanness abounds among us, and too many grow shameless and fearless about it, slighting y^e Punishm^t and rather Laughing at than humbled for so great abominations. And as Uncleanness, so Drunkenness gets head among us apace. In this vice too many exhaust y^r estates to y^e injury and suffering of y^r families, consume away y^r time very foolishly and unprofitably at y^e Taverns or y^r qwn & others houses and inflame themselves wth drink so as to Prejudice y^r Bodys, Rob y^r Good Name and undoe y^r Souls.

6. Pride mightily reigns among us, appearing in unsuitable liftings up under spiritual enjoym^{ts} — it being found much easier to be proud of y^m than to improve y^m in a right manner. As also Pride in Gifts of Knowledge, whence much Insolency and arrogancy wth peevish, froward, disrespectful carriages do arise; but especially y^r is a strange out running of this pride in y^e Garb and Apparell of a great many amongst us, each one straining himself to y^e utmost y^t he may not be exceeded by his Neighbor. Persons are taken with every new fashion, provide full for y^r lusts at any y^e hardest Rates, and in so doing sometimes going beyond rules of Modesty, and often times beyond y^e Decency of y^r Rank, & too often directly against Rules of Righteousness, while yy wrong those yy deal with by engaging more than yy can perform, in y^e mean time are forwarder to cry out of Oppression and y^e intolerable weight of necessary Public Charges.

7. The cry of much Unrighteousness is also heard among us, y^e root of wh is a fraudulent and deceitful frame of spirit y^t runs thro' y^e Country, so y^t too little of sincerity or plain down right dealing is to be found in o^r mutual dealings, but instead y^t of Jugling Tricks, crafty Conveyances, Strifes, Evasions, & Equivocations are freq: found and to serve men's turns withal. Yea, & too often down right Lying, whereby engagements are eluded, contracts and Covenants infringed, intercourse in affairs rendered diff^t, and even y^e Country itself evil spoken of — an evil every one Groans under, and yet too many help forward, and one way or other contribute to severally, tho' insensibly, themselves; trespassing one upon another, manifesting but little care, of course, to keep from doing wrong by creatures or other ways, but forward enough to Complain of y^r Neighbors from whom they suffer wrong, by wh means Plantations and families are filled with clamors and unruly passions, and their spirit Leavened with Rancor and Revengeful inclinations.

Things being thus, we cannot but, in y^e faithful discharge of y^e trust committed to us, put y^e whole Country upon y^e most serious and speedy endeav^r after a reformation as may, by y^e reality of it, witness for us y^t we have been carried to it upon better Principles than merely serving y^e present Turn, or w^r flattering y^m to get rid of o^r present affliction (leaving y^r fore matters of Law, wh we hope in y^r Season will be vigorously attended). These things y^t do particularly Concern y^e Sev^l Ranks of men we do earnestly Commend to y^r hearts and Consciences respectively, that every one do labor by y^e Grace of God to forsake evil and do good, y^t so it may dwell among us.

(1.) Let y^e Majestrates in whose hand the execution of y^e Law lyeth, stir up themselves by all due means to y^e most effectual filling up y^r great trust, so y^t as they Minister yy may be a terror to evil doers, &c. Let y^m also carefully se y^r under-officers, both y^t yy be qualified for y^r sevl: trusts, and y^t yy may receive all due encouragement in y^r work. Experience daily evidences the invalidity of y^e best laws wⁿ the execution of y^m is not strenuously attended and encouraged.

(2.) Let the Min: also stir up them: to y^e whole work of y^r Ministry, that yy may be Inflamed with love to y^e souls of men, and above all things seek after y^r conversion & building up in y^e most holy faith; y^t they may also labor after y^t exemplariness and holy converse as y^t in y^e choice of y^r company solidity of character and a voriness of discourse they may honor y^e Gospell and prevent any just ground of harsh reflection upon so high a Calling. — And foras much as there are many complaints of y^e unsuitableness of Ch: children to y^e Name of an Holy Seed, & there are some things granted on all hands as duty to be attended toward them, tho' other things ly under Controversy. We cannot but Judge it high time y^t such Generally allowed things be immediately set on foot in y^r Sev^l: Churches, — such as, (1) Instructing Ch: Childⁿ in Knowl: (2) Calling y^m up to y^e Personal owning of y^e Cov: and submitting them: to y^e watch and Discipline of y^e Church, (3) To enquire into their spiritual State, & stir them up to look after Jes: Christ in Good Earnest.

(3.) Let y^e several Churches take care to fill up y^e empty place of every office appointed by Jes: X for y^e edifying of his Body according to y^r taking the best help of Counsel for y^e removing any obstructions y^t ly in y^e way; and y^t yy endeavor to walk so as y^t an Interest in y^e Ordinances may be rendered desirable to all men except they are sinfully Prejudiced. In special, let y^m show forth these fruits of love and mutual watchfulness as to endeavor y^e help and healing of each others souls, — not hearing and spreading slander Reports, neglecting in y^e mean time or refusing to deal wth Persons concerned — an evill too much abounding in Churches.

(4.) Let all familys take pains to Recover out of those Disorders and Confusions, y^t we have Got so much Reason to Complain of. Especially let Parents & Masters make Conscience to keep up y^e authority of y^r Places, to restrain those under y^r care from licentious Liberty and extravagant Courses, by Putting forth y^t family authority y^t is given them by y^e Law of God and Men. And as Many of o^r Disorders Come by Boards that acc^t themselves Lawless, Let all family Governours resolve not to take or Keep any but w^t will be subject to good Orders. Let y^m also be Conscientiously Carefull and Solemn in keeping of family worship, — in Prayer, Reading & Catechising, for want of wh we are like to have a Generation arise y^t will prove heathenish in wildness and ignorance. In short, let them look to y^r ways and households, y^t sloath, Idleness, Profaneness, Confusion, Shame and Beggery do not overrun y^r familys. On y^e other hand, let Inferiours carry wth all due subjⁿ to those over y^m.

And to young Persons [we recommend]: Not to be too fond of early Liberty, wh tho' sweet now, stings at last.

[To] Fly from vain Company, as Opposite to Conversion.

That in special yy would lay down y^r Meetings on Sabbath Evenings, whereby yy put themselves into Satan's hand.

(5) Let all Sorts stir up y^mselves to seek help of God, that [they] may forsake y^e Gross Evils Mentioned.

Lastly. As to y^e Indians, and the sins committed about them, [we confess]

That we have not been so studiously Careful for y^e good of y^r souls.

[That] We have not set such good Examples before y^m so as to make Rel: lovely to them, but on y^e Contrary, Abusing y^m wth Drink for filthy lucher's sake.

THE NORMAL SCHOOLS OF MASSACHUSETTS.

BY REV. ALONZO H. QUINT,

MEMBER OF THE MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF EDUCATION.

We feel that no apology is needed for introducing this subject into our denominational publication. The interests of public education are common to all denominations; and to us they have a peculiar value. Our faith has flourished only in connection with a high standard of education. Free Schools were the thought of Puritanism. Of this system, Normal Schools are only the result and the necessary completion. Nor have our own men been backward in this movement. The first public advocate of Normal Schools this side of the Atlantic was an Orthodox Congregationalist. The first Normal School in America was established by one whose name still honors our list of clergymen. While we cheerfully admit that the actual establishment of these as State Schools was brought about mainly by men of another denomination, yet the first man selected for the headship of a State Normal School was an Orthodox minister. The second (and first accepting), was an Orthodox man and Professor in an Orthodox College. We do not say these things in any clannish spirit; but merely to indicate the fact that, contrary to an often received opinion, our own denomination has not been idle in this part of public service. Early distrust of some who were influential in the educational measures of twenty-five years ago, kept, it is true, a part of our number aloof from the work then so nobly begun. That distrust, always morbid, has long since vanished; and all Protestant denominations cordially meet on the platform of Free Schools.

Our denomination owes it to itself, to make its commanding influence felt in all the departments of public education.

The Normal Schools of Massachusetts are, like all others bearing that name, institutions established for the sole and special purpose of training teachers. It is held that the work of education requires as peculiar preparation as that of any other of the learned occupations. To give that preparation, the State supports—at its own expense, and thus free to the pupil, the Normal Schools now established, with the simple purpose of furnishing to the Public Schools of the Commonwealth teachers as well qualified as such special advantages can make them. It is not supposed that none are good teachers without such training; nor that such training will always insure good teachers; but it is confidently asserted that, other things being equal, the advantages of such a discipline are undeniably clear.

Occupying this ground, the Normal Schools neither supersede nor interfere with, High Schools, Academies, nor Colleges. They are superadded to each, as a necessity, not for the personal education of the pupil, but for his best preparation to educate others.

The first Normal School of the State, and we may add, the first State Normal School in America, was established in 1838.¹ It was but an experiment; its advocates dared call it nothing more. Years of patient argument had been required to secure even so much as the trial; and it succeeded so far as to be a trial, only when private generosity offered a munificent sum on condition of an equal amount from the treasury of the State.

Normal Schools had long been established in Europe. "The first Seminary with a distinct plan for the preparation of teachers, was established at Stettin, about eighty miles north of Berlin, in 1735." Frederick the Great organized a second at Berlin, in 1748. Another was established at Halle, in 1757. The first in France dates from 1810; in Holland, from 1816; and in Europe there are now not far from three hundred. These are almost entirely for males; a Normal School for females was an American idea.

"To Professor Denison Olmstead," says that intelligent and able educationist, Rev. B. G. Northrop, "seems to belong the credit of first advocating in America, the necessity and advantages of a seminary devoted exclusively to the training of teachers. In 1816, while a Tutor in Yale College, he delivered one of the Masters' Orations 'on the State of Education in Connecticut,' in which he aimed to show that the secret of the great defect in our school education was the ignorance and incompetency of the teachers, and the only remedy was a 'Seminary for teachers.'" He had been a teacher in common school and academy, and understood their wants. He had just matured a plan for a series of newspaper articles on the subject, advocating a school with a two years' course, admission on examination, and free tuition,—when he received, and, with hesitation on account of these plans, accepted the appointment of Professor of Chemistry in the University of North Carolina.

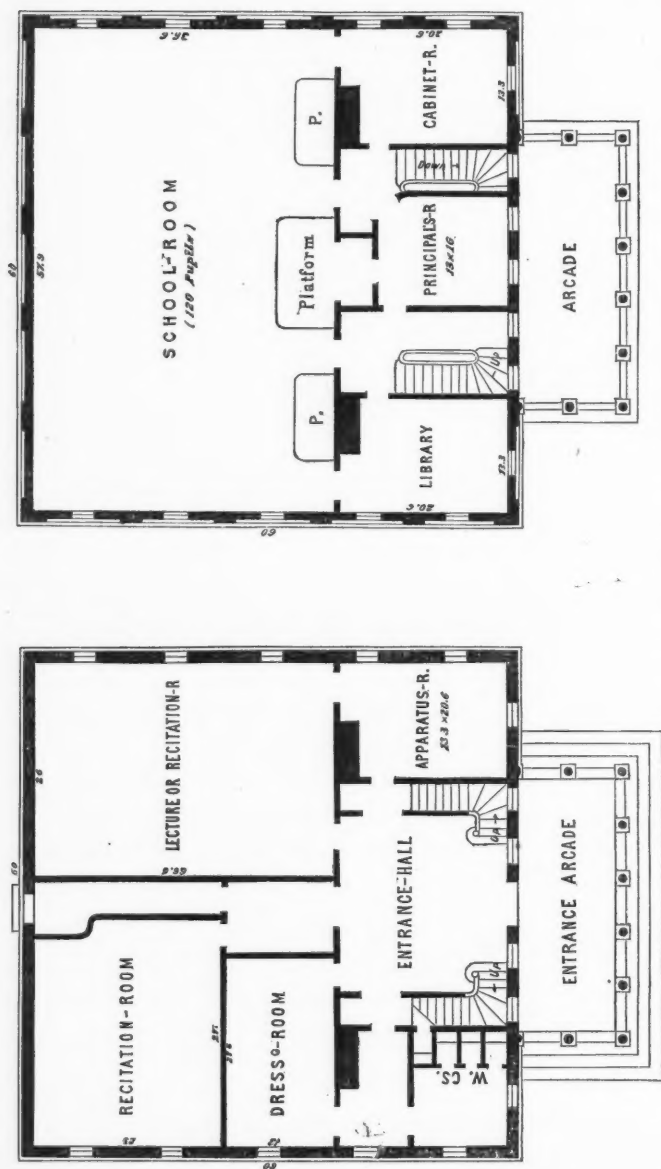

Nine years later, Governor Clinton recommended to the Legislature of New York the establishment of a Seminary for teachers; and repeated the recommendation the next year, but without any practical result. The same year, 1825, James G. Carter and Rev. Thomas H. Gallaudet, independently called the attention of the public to the same subject, in a series of articles, and their plans were commended by Professor Ticknor in the North American Review for 1827. In the same year, also, a memorial was presented to the Legislature of Massachusetts for appropriations to this object, by Mr. Carter; a bill was reported, but lost in the Senate by one vote.

What the State failed to do, was done by one man, whom we may be proud to reckon still a pastor of an Orthodox Congregational Church. Rev. Samuel R. Hall, now of Brownington, Vt., opened, in 1823, in Concord, Vt., a school for teachers. He continued it for seven years, when he undertook the care of the Teacher's Seminary at Andover.

"My early advantages for education," says Mr. Hall,¹ "were very limited. This led me early to feel that I must educate myself, or fail of an education which would qualify me to become useful in the world. During my entire youth I suffered much from feeble health. I became a teacher when about twenty, and was more or less of the time devoted to the business of teaching consecutively for about a third of a century.

"One of the first convictions fastened on my mind, after I became a teacher, was that the whole system of education in the country was defective; that the time of scholars in the common schools was in a great measure lost. I determined, therefore, to do what I could by my feeble influence to reform abuses and correct evils. But I felt, as well I might, that I could hope but for very limited success. My services, poor as they were, were sought—and at my own prices; this was an encouragement that earnest efforts for reform would be both seconded and appreciated by the community. I taught in Maine, New Hampshire, and other States, and in each observed the same facts.

"I received a license to preach, while teaching at Fitchburg, Mass., in May, 1822, and an appointment to labor as a domestic missionary at Concord, Vt. In visiting the schools of the town and vicinity, I became convinced that more would be accomplished for their benefit by 'teaching the teacher' than in any other way. When requested by the church to settle as pastor, I made it a condition that I should be allowed to establish a seminary in the place, as a means of elevating the character of teachers, and advancing the usefulness of schools.

"The seminary was opened in March, 1823. Suitable buildings were soon after erected, and the school was incorporated by the Legislature.

"The school was more successful than I had any reason to expect; and those who went out from it as common school teachers were so generally successful that their services were greatly sought for in Vermont, New Hampshire, and Canada. A course of familiar lectures on school-keeping was given each year, and in 1829, a small volume was committed to the press, hoping thereby to awaken a wider interest in the subjects discussed. These lectures, though prepared under the pressure of the labor required by a large parish and a large school, met with unexpected success.²

"In 1830, the trustees of Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., had erected a large building for an English department and a Normal School. I was invited to assume the charge of it as principal, and, though with much misgiving, did so. The seminary was opened in September of that year. The course of study in the Normal School was arranged for three years. But so great was the demand for teachers, that it was found difficult to retain young men during the full course. A few, however, completed it, and are still devoted to teaching as a profession.

"After seven years, my health became so much impaired by overtasking, and the unfavorable influence of the climate so near the sea, I was led to resign the charge of the seminary, and accepted an appointment of principal of the Teachers' Seminary then being established at Plymouth, N. H. That school was continued but three years, owing to the pecuniary embarrassments of the trustees."

To Mr. Hall undoubtedly belongs the credit of being the father of Normal Schools in America. "Here," says Hon. Henry Barnard, "in an obscure corner of New England, under the hand of one who was, to a remarkable degree, self taught, self prompted, and alone in planning it, was an institution with all the essential characteristics of a Normal School, eighteen years before the Massachusetts movement had reached that point of development which secured the establishment of the Normal School at Lexington."

The public mind was gradually becoming alive to the defects of the system of public instruction, through the want of a sufficient number of well qualified teachers. But, as usual in great public movements, the action of the few preceded the progress of the whole. At the session of the American Institute of Instruction held in Boston, August 29, 1836, one topic of discussion was "The Professional Education of Teachers." It was debated with the interest due to so important a subject, and resulted in the passage of the following:

"Resolved, That the business of teaching should be performed by those who have studied the subject of instruction as a profession. Therefore,

"Resolved, That there ought to be at least one Seminary in each State devoted exclusively to the education of teachers; and that this Seminary should be authorized to confer appropriate degrees."

On the succeeding day the Institute, after some discussion as to its language, adopted the following vote:

"Ordered, That the Board of Directors be instructed to memorialize the Legislature on the subject of establishing a Seminary for the education of teachers."

In accordance with this vote, a memorial was presented at the next session of the Legislature. It was an able and exhaustive paper. In support of its prayer "that provision may be made for the better preparation of the teachers of the schools of the Commonwealth," it alleged "a great want of well qualified teachers;" that this want was "felt especially by the most important and numerous class—the district schools;" that exertion to improve schools had "been met and baffled by the want of good teachers;" and this, notwithstanding the offer of the "highest salaries;" that "their place was supplied by persons exceedingly incompetent in many respects;" that experience was gained by those who have a fitness for the office "by the sacrifice, winter after winter, of the time and advancement of the children;" that "every school was liable to this waste; that many times no preparation is aimed at" on the part of teachers; and "the reaction of this deplorable incompetency of the teachers, upon the minds of the Committees," "threatened to continue the evil and render it perpetual." These statements were sustained in an argument of convincing force, and the remedy was shown. The paper,¹ signed by George

B. Emerson, Samuel R. Hall, William J. Adams, D. Kimball, E. A. Andrews, Benjamin Greenleaf, and N. Cleaveland, as Committee, was from the pen of the first named experienced and faithful friend of public education.

In the Annual Address of Governor Everett to the Legislature in January, 1837, appeared the following suggestion: "I submit to the Legislature whether the creation of a Board of Commissioners of Schools, to serve without salary, with authority to appoint a Secretary on reasonable compensation, would not be of great utility." We mention this fact here because the creation of the Board of Education and the establishment of Normal Schools were virtually component parts of one measure in that time of beginnings, as the existence of both has been linked all through their history. In furtherance of this suggestion, a petition² was presented from a convention held in Bristol County, of which Cromwell Washburn was President, and P. W. Leland and James B. Congdon were Secretaries. And in aid of the memorial of the Institute, was a petition³ from a Convention held January 24, 1837, of delegates from towns in Plymouth and Norfolk Counties, which had been prepared by Rev. Chas. Brooks.⁴

The plan for establishing a Board of Education was successful at the session of 1837; that for the education of teachers failed, though not for want of effort. A proposal was made in the House, January 11, that the "Committee on Education be instructed to inquire into the expediency of endowing some literary institution for the purpose of qualifying teachers," but was rejected. On the 14th, however, that ⁴ The labors of this gentleman in the cause deserve special mention. Convinced that the improvement of schools must come through improvement in teachers, he labored zealously, both in public and private, to satisfy the public mind of the necessity of Normal Schools. An excellent address by Mr. Brooks before the Institute, in 1837, embodies much knowledge acquired abroad.

Committee was ordered to consider the means needed for "the better education of teachers of the public schools." But no definite result was reached, except that in the original draft of the act establishing the Board of Education, was a section empowering the Board to secure the "better education of common school teachers of both sexes;" but that was struck out in the course of proceedings; and nothing appeared to be done, at that session, for Normal Schools.

But much was really accomplished in the establishment of the Board of Education. The suggestion of the Governor resulted in the reporting of a bill¹ in the House by Hon. James G. Carter, for the Committee on Education, March 24, 1837, which, after passing through the various stages, was approved April 20,²—the only test vote being upon the passage to a third reading in the Senate, when the records read twenty-five yeas, one nay. By that Act, the Board of Education was constituted upon a foundation never since modified. It was made to consist, in addition to the Governor and Lieutenant Governor, ex-officio, of eight members by appointment, each serving eight years, and one retiring each year.³ No control over schools was given it; nor was it to arrange subjects for legislation; its duties were, first, to prepare and lay before the Legislature, in a printed form, on or before the second Wednesday in January, annually, an abstract of the School Returns; secondly, "to collect information of the actual condition and efficiency of the Common

² The bill was taken up April 14, and considered in Committee of the Whole, which reported favorably, with some amendments; was ordered to a third reading; it was so read, April 15, amended, and passed to be engrossed. The Senate received it April 17; it was referred to the Committee on Education, reported back without amendment, and was ordered to a third reading; on the 18th it passed to be engrossed; on the 19th, passed to be enacted in both branches; and on the 20th, was approved by the Governor.

Schools, and other means of Popular Education, and to diffuse as widely as possible, through every part of the Commonwealth, information of the most approved and successful methods of arranging the studies and conducting the education of the young ;" and, thirdly, to make to the Legislature, annually, a detailed report of its doings, with such observations as their experience and reflection might suggest, upon the condition and efficiency of our System of Popular Education, and upon the most practicable means of improving and extending it. It should be added that the services of the Board were to be, and are, entirely gratuitous.

The Board organized on the 29th of June, 1837 ; and in its first Annual Report, urged upon the Legislature the importance of the education of teachers. It said that "it must be admitted, as the voice of reason and experience, that institutions for the formation of teachers must be established among us, before the all-important work of forming the minds of our children can be performed in the best possible manner ;" it supported this statement with arguments from the nature of the case, and from facts of observation ; it appealed to the successful experience of other countries, where schools for teachers had been tried ; and it expressed the sanguine hope that Massachusetts would soon be furnished with such institutions. At the same session, were presented also petitions from the "Town of Nantucket" and the "Nantucket County Association," for the establishment of Normal Schools.

The anticipations of the Board were speedily realized. On the 12th of March, 1838, the Secretary communicated to the Legislature the fact that private munificence had placed at the Board's disposal,¹ $10,000, to be expended under its direction for the qualifying of teachers, on condition that the State would place in the hands of the Board $10,000 more, for the same purpose. A Joint Committee, of which Hon. James Savage was Chairman, reported, and ably argued for, the appropriation requested. The Resolutions to that effect were introduced into the House, March 22, 1838,² and were approved by the Governor, April 19.

In the disposal of this money, no restrictions as to form or detail were imposed upon the Board ; nor had they any guide in existing institutions. European schools could hardly be a model for American. Regarding the whole enterprise, therefore, as a matter of experiment, and knowing that the mass of the people were undecided as to the plan itself, they proceeded with great caution. The amount at their disposal they concluded to appropriate to a three years' trial in three different localities. Finding considerable interest to exist on the subject of location, they determined to be partially governed in selection by evidence of the most liberal co-operation on the part of the citizens. The result was that, Lexington, Barre, and Bridgewater, were selected for the three schools. Lexington and Barre were decided upon, December 27, 1838 ; and Bridgewater, May 28, 1840. In each case the Board agreed to keep the school at the place selected, on condition that buildings should be provided, and other pecuniary aid furnished. Lexington provided a building, and citizens gave $543 towards its fitting up and furnishing ; Barre, the building and $500 ; and Bridgewater the same. The schools were opened, at Lexington, July 3, 1839 ; at Barre, September 4, 1839 ; and at Bridgewater, August 10, 1840. No other school was established till 1854.

² The Resolutions were taken up and passed to be engrossed, April 10th ; on the same day, were sent to the Senate, and by a vote of 143 to 46, were ordered to a second reading ; were read again, April 12, and passed to be engrossed ; to be enacted, in both branches, April 18 ; and were approved by the Governor, April 19. A vote by yeas and nays, upon the passage to the engrossing, in the Senate, reads, thirty-one yeas, one nay.

These three schools thoroughly tested the theory. Each was fortunate in its Principal. For Lexington, Rev. Cyrus Pierce,¹ then of Nantucket, was selected June 21, 1839,—a man endowed with remarkable qualifications for such a post. Prof. Samuel P. Newman, who took charge of the school at Barre, the first in order of election of the three Principals, having been chosen May 30, 1839, brought with him an excellent reputation from his Professorship of Rhetoric in Bowdoin College; and Capt. Nicholas Tillinghast imbued the Bridgewater school with a spirit it still exhibits.

But it was no easy work to establish the system in the minds of the public. The school at Lexington opened with but three pupils, though before the close of the year it numbered over twenty. It met with great opposition. It was a novelty, and Massachusetts is slow to adopt new things. Private and endowed institutions, in many cases, arrayed their influence against it. Denominational sensitiveness was vigorously and persistently appealed to. Fears lest sectarian influences should become paramount, were linked with hostility because sectarian doctrines were excluded. The inertia of many teachers threw its dead weight into the attack. The imaginary "centralization" of the Board was held up as anti-republican. So strong was the early opposition that it was feared that the first school would meet with a speedy death. But the faith and ability of its Principal, Cyrus Pierce,² prevented that; "I would rather die," said he, "than fail in the undertaking;" and he succeeded. The influence of such men as Adams, Everett, Rantoul, Webster, and Channing; and the power exerted among believers of our own doctrines, by such ministers as Rev. Drs. Thomas Robbins and Emerson Davis, and later, President Humphrey, and Rev. Dr. Henry B. Hooker, whose influence, as members of the Board of Education, our churches knew would never be used against our faith;³ and the good, practical results which speedily appeared,—carried the system through its days of crisis. When the three years' trial was ended, the Board of Education, in a special report,⁴ made after examination by a special Committee, (of which Hon. William G. Bates was chairman,) unanimously declared that the experiment was successful, and asked, as the $20,000 had been almost entirely expended, that provision be made for the further support of the schools. The request was successful. The Legislature, by Resolve approved March 3, 1842, appropriated $6,000 annually to the schools for three years.

It is worthy of notice that this action was but two years subsequent to a violent attack upon the schools, and upon the Board with which they seemed to be linked. In the Legislature of 1840, the Committee on Education reported to the House an urgent and decided argument against both, together with a bill to repeal all the acts establishing them. This was on the 7th of March; the report was laid on the table, and ordered to be printed, sleeps near the spot where, while a student in College, in 1807, he began his career as a teacher, and where, in 1858, it closed.

³ The Orthodox men who adhered to the progressive measures, felt that time would remove some accidental causes of disturbance, and harmonize both sides, and so they waited patiently. The results have proved their wisdom; in five years' somewhat intimate connection with the Normal Schools, and other State educational interests, we have never yet seen the slightest appearance of a denominational thought in the mind of a single person charged with their oversight.

⁴ Fifth Annual Report, 1842.

¹ Rev. Jacob Abbott had been first chosen, but declined, as he did a proposal to take his choice of the schools.

² Born in Waltham, Ms., August 15, 1790, baptized August 22; graduated H. C. 1810; teacher at Nantucket for several years; studied Divinity at Cambridge for three years; ordained over the Unitarian Church in North Reading, May 9, 1819, as colleague with Rev. Eliab Stone, (who died Aug. 31, 1822); dismissed May 19, 1827; taught four years at North Andover, and six at Nantucket; July 3, 1839, entered on his labors at Lexington; resigned in three years, on account of ill health, but returned to the school (removed to West Newton) three years after; again resigned five years after; visited Europe; taught again in private school; and died April 6, 1860; he and on the 10th, a thousand copies additional.¹ On the 11th, a minority report was presented,² of which two thousand copies were ordered. The bill was postponed, by special assignments, until the 19th; in the intermediate time, various petitions were received in favor of the schools, and the apparent current against them was reversed; and the bill was refused a third reading, by 182 to 245. The arguments used on this occasion against the measures assailed, were rather anticipations of future harm than exhibitions of existing evils. Other attacks have since been made, but without success. The last, (entirely futile,) was before the Legislature of 1860, the character of which may be judged from the fact that the petitioners declare "knowledge to be a power to do evil, and that the possessors of superior knowledge employ it to fleece those who have less; that there are already too many learned men; that the State is oppressed with them; that colleges are a nuisance; that the professions of theology, law and medicine are overcrowded, and yet that, though the supply exceeds the demand, the articles grow dearer and dearer, contrary to the usual laws; that every graduate becomes a burden to the community, incapable of rendering a substantial equivalent for his support, and yet eating up the over-produce of any five ordinary men."³

² House Documents, No. 53.

³ A choice specimen of some petitions then presented is as follows:

"All our children in mass from 15 years old & under to have an equal chance in education & to do this I would recommend a law that such schools shall be maintained at least seven months in the year, and that their Prudential committees shall employ good & efficient teachers to teach the most advanced under fifteen years old & older if the district determine & that all cases of trouble with the teacher shall be settled by a majority of those present at a legally called meeting provided it cannot be amicably settled by the Prudential committee and that it shall be the duty of the Prudential Committee to canvass the district at the commencement of each term of the school, & if any children who are compus mentus are deprived of school for want of

The School at Lexington having outgrown its accommodations, was removed, in September, 1844, to West Newton; and that at Barre, to Westfield, in 1844,—a removal from Barre being authorized May 25, 1842, and directed May 31, 1843. The last named, with that at Bridgewater, had from the beginning, very inadequate accommodations. In the winter of 1845, a memorial was presented to the Legislature, by Charles Sumner, R. C. Waterston, G. F. Thayer, Charles Brooks, and William Brigham, a "Committee of Friends of Education," setting forth the utility of the system of Normal School training and the want of proper buildings, apparatus, and libraries, for these two schools; and concluding with asking an appropriation of $5,000, conditional on the contribution of $5,000 more from individuals, which they was authorized to pledge.⁴ On the unanimous recommendation of the Committee on Education, the Legislature granted the petition. Buildings were erected at each place, and the schools have since remained in their respective localities. To provide "a more commodious site and building, and the necessary appurtenances and apparatus," for the School at West Newton, the State, April 10, 1852, appropriated $6,000. Proposals from Framingham decided the removal of the school to that place; a building was erected, and on the 15th of January, 1854, was dedicated to its use. This building cost more than an-food or raiment, he shall forthwith supply them with such things as he may judge necessary at the expense of the town and that he shall see and that the prudential committee shall receive such compensation as the district shall determine & now I ask you mr chairman to see that such laws are passed as is necessary to carry out this system"

He further demanded "the abolition of the Board of Education, who are prodigating the people's money, & sticking their hands into the money up to their elbows. till their eyes stick out with fat;" he demanded it "in the name of the Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress," who for their blessed deeds (as he said in another place) "have been judged worthy to enter their fathers house not made with hands and eternal in the heavens & that to day are ranging those bright elysium fields that surround their father mansion—" ticipated, the whole amount being $15,750. The town of Framingham paid $2,500; the Boston and Worcester Railroad Company, $2,000; old furniture brought $250 more; and the deficiency of $5,000 was met by the State.

Still another school becoming necessary, the Board, upon petition for increased accommodations, recommended in 1853, that a fourth be established in Essex County. The Legislature adopted the recommendation, and, by Resolve approved April 16, 1853, appropriated $6,000 for that purpose. The city of Salem exhibited claims, in its population, ease of access, and generosity, which could not be overlooked; and a building there was dedicated September 14, 1854, which cost $18,500, of which the State had paid only the $6,000; the remainder, with the exception of $2,000 from the Eastern Railroad Company, was paid by the city. The plans of this building are on pp. 44, 45.

The appropriation, in 1853, of $1,000 annually to each School, for distribution among the pupils, with a view to neutralize the variation in expenses caused by the various distances of the different pupils from the schools, completed the features of the State system. Private thoughtfulness, however, added to the means of success, in a bequest by Henry Todd, Esq., who died March 2, 1849, and by whose will the Board of Education, in trust for the schools, received as residuary legatee, the sum of $11,797 72, only the income of which is to be annually expended so as to be a clear addition to what would otherwise be at the disposal of the Board for the Normal Schools.

The following table exhibits the amount of money actually expended on the Normal Schools from the beginning, with the sources from which derived. The table, if incomplete, is so only in regard to donations from individuals:

The STATE NORMAL HALL, at Salem, Ms., is a Brick Building, sixty-seven feet square. I, Entrance Hall; K, Reception Room; D, Long Passage; J and L, Dressing Rooms; A, Lecture and Music Room; B, C, G, H, N, S, T, Recitation Rooms; E, E, E, Closets; F, F, Cellar Stairs; V, Water Tank for Closets below; U, Stairs to Library, Apparatus, &c., above; M, Principal School Room; P, P, P, Stairs connecting the two stories; Q, Room for Books of Reference; O and R, Teachers' Rooms.

The table on p. 43 shows that the State has expended upon the Normal Schools,—

Erection and Furnishing of Buildings,	$28,318.80
Support of Schools,	151,242.91½
Aid to Students,	18,842.61
TOTAL,	$198,404.32½

If any person should deem this aggregate extravagant—we had prepared a table showing the amount of expenditures by the State government in various reformatory, correctional, and charitable departments, collated from the several auditors' reports; but our space forbids its insertion. We make room, however, for the aggregates, premising, that if we have overlooked any item, it renders the comparison less favorable to the schools:

CHARITABLE.
To the Blind,	$211,900.28
“ Deaf and Dumb,	138,799.63
“ Eye and Ear Infirmary,	67,500.00
“ School for Idiots, (11 years,)	83,375.00
“ Lunatic Asylums,	476,762.94
“ Paupers and Almshouses,	2,812,012.64
TOTAL,	$3,789,340.49
CORRECTIONAL.
For the State Prison, (16 years,)	$374,197.26
“ Reform Schools, (13 years,)	584,691.08
TOTAL,	$958,788.34

Lists of the teachers of the several schools, with some other facts, follow.

The School at FRAMINGHAM was opened at Lexington, July 3, 1839; removed to West Newton, September, 1844; and to Framingham, January 15, 1854; on the latter occasion, an appropriate address was delivered by George B. Emerson, Esq., a member of the Board.

The teachers, and their time of service, have been as follows:—

Regarding the WESTFIELD School, we avail ourselves of information derived from Rev. Emerson Davis, D. D., one of the first members of the Board, and afterwards particularly connected with this school:

"The Normal Schools of this Commonwealth when first commenced were regarded as an experiment. They were located in places that would furnish, for three years gratuitously, the necessary accommodations. But when the experiment was sufficiently satisfactory to warrant their permanent establishment, it became necessary to locate them in places that were easy of access. A School was commenced at Barre in September, 1839, for three years, under the care of Professor Samuel P. Newman, who died in 1842, at which time the school was suspended. That town being distant from the railroads, it was thought best to remove it to some place on the line of the Western Railroad that would be central to the Western half of the State. It was two years before any acceptable offer was made. It was removed to Westfield, and re-opened in September, 1844, in a part of the Academy building, where it continued one term; and was then removed to a suit of rooms fitted up in the Town Hall, where it continued till a building was completed in September, 1846. During these two years it was under the care of Rev. Emerson Davis, pastor of the Congregational Church, who devoted to it as much time as he could spare from his other duties. He was in the school a short time every day, and instructed some classes, and lectured upon the theory and practice of teaching. Mr. William Clough, a graduate of Harvard, and whose reputation as a teacher stood high, was the principal instructor the first year, and Rev. P. K. Clarke, now pastor of a Church in South Deerfield, was the instructor during the second year. The school was small during these two years; it had some prejudices to encounter, and some obstacles to overcome. After dwelling in tents for two years the Normal building was completed,¹ one half of which was paid for by the citizens of Westfield; and Mr. David S. Rowe, of Rockport, and a graduate of Bowdoin College, secured as its permanent principal.

"The School, now being placed on a permanent basis, and in charge of a man who could devote all his time to it, and who understood the wants of the teachers, increased in numbers and usefulness.

"It was at first more like a good Academy than like a professional school. Much less attention was then given to the art of teaching than is now. Scholars were admitted for a single term, though they were expected to attend one year, in all. They were deficient in their knowledge of the first rudiments, and it was necessary to devote so much time to a thorough examination of the subjects taught, that but little time was devoted to modes of instruction, discipline, and the management of schools. Less time is required for teaching the elementary branches now than fifteen years ago, because the common schools have been much improved, and those admitted to the Normal Schools are better educated. This School is now more strictly professional in its character than formerly.

"In March, 1853, Mr. Rowe resigned, and set up a private school at parrytown, New York. It was without a Principal until September, 1854, when Mr. William H. Wells, a distinguished teacher in Newburyport, was appointed. During this interval the School was conducted by the assistant teachers, chiefly by Mr. John W. Dickinson, the present principal. Mr. Wells having been appointed Superintendent of Schools for the city of Chicago, resigned, and left in May, 1856. The School was conducted the remainder of the term by Professor Crosby, (now at Salem,) and Mr. Dickinson.

"In Sept., 1856, Mr. Dickinson, who is a graduate of Williams College, became its principal, under whose superintendence it has become deservedly popular, and is answering the end for which these schools were established."

The school at BRIDGEWATER was commenced in the old Town House, which fitted up at the expense of the citizens of the place. In this building it remained and flourished until the summer of 1846. The generous private donation of $5,000, together with the $5,000 furnished by the State, then furnished this school as it did Westfield, with a new building. It being the first Normal School edifice actually built for that purpose on this continent, and its erection following close upon, and almost in consequence of, a bitter attack upon the whole system, the Board deemed the event of sufficient importance to demand a formal recognition. The building was dedicated on August 19, 1846. Hon. William G. Bates, of the Board, delivered the dedicatory address; Hon. Amasa Walker pronounced an oration before the graduates; and at the festival, Hon. Horace Mann and others made fitting addresses.

This school, like the one at Lexington, was particularly fortunate in the selection of its first principal, Nicholas Tillinghast, whose enthusiasm, and at the same time, clear and precise method of analytical investigation, speedily gave this school a high and marked character.

The teachers have been as follows:—

The SALEM Normal School building was dedicated September 14, 1854, an address being delivered by Ex-Governor George S. Boutwell, a member of the Board; this address, as is the case with the other similar addresses, is printed in connection with the next subsequent Annual Report of the Board. The school opened under flattering auspices, and has enjoyed a steady and advancing prosperity. Its library, consisting of between six and seven thousand volumes, is the largest of the Normal School libraries; it has increased within two years over three thousand volumes, with the cost of less than two hundred dollars to the State. This increase, with other advances, rendered enlargement necessary, which has recently been accomplished by alterations in the attic—one thousand dollars of the expense of which, came from one generous individual. The plan of this enlargement appears on page 45.

The teachers of this school have been as follows:—

The Normal Schools bear the same relation, as to government, to the Board of Education, that common schools bear to the School Committee in undistricted towns. The more particular care of each school is confided to a sub-committee of Visitors, one of whose members, at least, with the Secretary, is present at the examination for admission of each class,—who conduct the examination at the close of each term,—visit the school at such intermediate times as seem proper,—and conduct all expenditures; in expenditures the visitors cannot exceed the sum allotted by the Board, nor can the Board exceed the amount specifically appropriated by the Legislature each year. The schools are open to the public at all times.

An applicant for admission, must be, if a male, at least seventeen; if a female, at least sixteen years of age, and must make an explicit declaration of an intention to become a teacher in the schools of this State; must give a pledge to remain in the school at least three consecutive terms,—(there are two terms a year.)—and to observe faithfully all the regulations of the institution; must also present a certificate of good physical, intellectual and moral character, from some responsible person, and must pass a satisfactory examination in the common branches, viz:—Reading, Spelling, Writing, Defining, Grammar, Geography, Arithmetic, and History.

The course of study includes all the branches taught in common schools; the advanced course includes such branches as are required by law in High Schools. Appropriate diplomas are conferred upon those able to pass a rigid examination in either course.

Of the usefulness of these schools, it was not our purpose to speak. It will be allowable, however, to refer to the fact that on several occasions systematic efforts have been made to ascertain the public estimate of graduates employed as teachers; and in each case with flattering results. The eighth report of the Board (1845), contains many testimonials upon this point. In 1858, the Secretary addressed a circular to the School Committee of each town in the State, asking information as to the success of these teachers. "Answers were received from 202 towns. Of these, 68 had never employed graduates of Normal Schools, and several others had employed a single graduate only for a brief period of time. Most of the Committees in those towns naturally declined to express an opinion upon the system. Of the Committees of the remaining towns, 11 are decidedly opposed to the schools, while 106 express themselves favorable, with degrees of feeling, from calm moderation to ardent enthusiasm, growing out of a long and satisfactory experience." Everything unfavorable in these replies, and a large part of those favorable, are printed, occupying 86 pages of the Report of the year 1859. So decided a testimony is unanswerable.

The following table gives the number of pupils who have entered the several Normal Schools, term by term; terms did not correspond, in the different schools, until 1855:

SUMMARY.—Framingham, 1,157; Westfield, 1,449 (443 Males, 1,006 Females); Bridgewater, 1,222 (507 Males, 715 Females); Salem, 543. TOTAL, 4,371,—less a small number re-entering at different times.

The number of graduates, that is of those whose who have fulfilled the prescribed course, is, of course, very much less. Up to the end of the first term in 1860, the number is as follows: Framingham, 740; Westfield, (?); Bridgewater, 813; Salem, 218.

CONGREGATIONALISM SPECIALLY ADAPTED TO PROMOTE REVIVALS OF RELIGION.

BY REV. HENRY M. DEXTER, BOSTON.

THE following postulates are assumed, for the purposes of this discussion, viz :

1. All mankind—now living, and to live—need to be regenerated and sanctified.

2. Their regeneration and sanctification is the work which the Church of Christ must regard herself as charged with, on earth,—so far as human agency may have a place in bringing it about.

3. The heart of man is so hard, its natural disinclination toward the things of God, so decided, and the power of the ordinary working of the Church, so inadequate to overcome all the difficulties of the case, that extraordinary manifestations of Divine co-operation—taking the form of what are commonly called “Revivals of Religion”—seem to be essential to the end sought.

4. The Holy Ghost is the Divine agent, whose special presence and manifested power produces revivals of religion, and makes them effectual to the “pulling down of strongholds, casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ.”

5. God’s plan—so far as it is revealed in the Word, and in the past—seems to be for the Holy Ghost to accomplish this work of human salvation, by acting upon and through the Church; stimulating and guiding the ordinary machinery of grace to those higher achievements which constitute the glory and the joy of revivals.

6. The Holy Ghost may, and sometimes does, work through no Church agencies, or with very inadequate ones.

7. Yet it is reasonable to suppose that Divine Grace will give the preference to those methods of Church action which are most congenial toward co-operation with it—especially if they are also nearest to the letter and spirit of the Bible.

The question which we raise, and whose affirmative we shall seek to prove—without denying that God has often greatly blessed other denominations of Christians, and will always reward all true faith and honest labor, however imperfect in its processes; and without affirming that the special advantages of our own system have ever yet had full justice done them by a wholly faithful application of their power—is, then, simply this: Whether Congregationalism, as a system of Church order and working, is specially congenial toward co-operation with the Holy Ghost in revivals of religion?

1. We claim that it is so in virtue of its special freeness of action, and flexibility of adaptation to varying circumstances that may surround it. That state of high devotional feeling, and eager interest in the great truths of the Gospel, which is commonly called a Revival of Religion, is—we are not discussing now, whether it ought to be, or not—exceptional to the ordinary condition of the Church and the world. It makes special claims upon the officers and membership of the churches. Pastors are called upon, by it, to a different presentation of truth; to warmer and more solemn appeals; often to a multiplication of services undesirable before; and especially to an amount of personal labor with inquirers, for which opportunity is not given in the ordinary experiences of their office. And individual Christians are often constrained by it to intermit, for a time, the duties of their ordinary vocations, and give themselves to the sweet work of persuading those to be reconciled to God, who meet them half-way in interest, and whose eager souls are asking them, 'what must we do to be saved?'

If, now, our religion is to imitate that laborious adaptation of itself to all classes and every condition of society which is suggested by the example of the great Apostle, who made himself a servant to all that he might gain the more:—unto the Jews, becoming as a Jew, that he might gain the Jews; to them that were under the law, as under the law, that he might gain them that were under the law; to them that were without law, as without law, (being not without law to God, but under the law to Christ,) that he might gain them that were without law; to the weak, becoming as weak, that he might gain the weak; and being made all things to all men, that he might by all means save some;—it must, not merely in its essential spirit, but in all its forms and methods, possess that flexibility and power of instant adaptation to every possible exigency of time, place and circumstance, which will enable it always, and at the shortest notice, to do the right thing, at the right time, and in the right manner. Congregationalism—as has been aptly and beautifully said, by one of the brightest ornaments of the New England pulpit—is nothing else than common sense applied to the matters of religion; and common sense applied to matters of religion is just the thing, and the only thing which is, or can be, equal to the peculiar exigencies of a revival of religion. When the Spirit of the Lord has come down in great power—as it did so wonderfully through all our borders in the Winter and Spring of 1857-8—and crowds daily throng unusual places of prayer, as well as fill the churches at the time of Sabbath worship; bringing special requests to be offered to the Lord; bringing peculiar difficulties to be solved by the ministration of the Word, as a medium of the teaching of the Spirit; bringing unwonted states of mind to the hearing of the Gospel; bringing spirits burdened, and even crushed, by the heavy anxieties of sin, to be lightened by the manifestation of the truth; then what is needed is not a Prayer-book, not a volume of Homilies, nor any service that is foreordained to meet the chronology of the ecclesiastical year—beginning at Advent, and proceeding duly through Septuagesima, Sexagesima and Quinquagesima Sundays, Easter, Ascension, Whit-Sunday, Trinity, and the twenty-seven Sundays after it; the circumcision of our Lord, the Epiphany, the conversion of St. Paul, the Purification of the Blessed Virgin, St. Matthias the Apostle, the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin, St. Mark the Evangelist, St. Philip and St. James the Apostles, St. Barnabas, the Nativity of St. John the Baptist, St. Peter the Apostle, St. James and St. Bartholomew and St. Matthew the Apostles, St. Michael and all Angels, St. Luke the Evangelist, St. Simon and St. Jude the Apostles, all Saints, St. Andrew the Apostle, St. Thomas the Apostle, the Nativity of our Lord, St. Stephen the Martyr, St. John the Evangelist, the Holy Innocents, Monday and Tuesday in Easter week, and Monday and Tuesday in Whitsun week, &c. &c.;¹—but prayer that will be prayer for them because it will go up to the throne of grace in simple, apt language, pouring their actual requests into the infinite ear, and calling down upon them the very blessings of which at that moment they feel themselves to stand in perishing need; and preaching that will array before them those motives, and burnish before them those appeals, and press upon them those doctrines, which to them, as they are, may helpfully and therefore hopefully, become the wisdom of God and the power of God unto salvation.

Other preachers may break over the formal obstacles that hem them in at such a time, and may preach truth, and the truth which is called for by the condition of the people; but we claim that Congregationalism especially favors that freeness and flexibility of religious movement which may always easiest adapt itself to the exact phase of the work which Providence appoints to be done. It has no system which claims particular Sabbaths for particular subjects and services; it is left to be guided always, in its selection of topics, by its study of the need of the people for instruction, or reproof, or comfort—just as the physician never dreams of giving calomel to all his patients on Mondays, and quinine on Tuesdays, and so on—with the days and with the drugs—but rather feels the pulse of his patient, and notes all the symptoms of his malady, and shapes his prescriptions by the contemporaneous demands of the disease. It is perfectly easy to see, at a glance, that the Rubrical system never contemplates revivals—never presupposes any particular exigencies of spiritual need—but lays out its work on the theory of dispensing, in an orderly and progressive manner, about so much Gospel in each year—just as in material things, it anticipates the usual fall of rain, and the ordinary visitations of the sunshine. In case of fearful drought, or appalling pestilence, or sudden invasion, the Archbishop of Canterbury—or some similarly situated functionary in another land—must write a prayer, which may then be circulated among the clergy, and not until that time can the Lord be called upon, in a lawful manner, by the great congregation, to be merciful, and to spare his people, and bless his heritage, in the particular manner which their particular exigency requires.

It is over Episcopacy, rather than other forms of church government, that Congregationalism has special advantage in this particular. In like manner we claim that it has advantage over it:—

2. In its want of reliance upon anything formal, or ritual, for salvation. The first necessity of right teaching in a revival of religion, or, in the aim to produce one, is to impress upon the soul the indispensable and immediate necessity of penitently believing on the Lord Jesus Christ unto salvation. Every other reliance must be swept out of the way. All confidence in good works must be destroyed. All idea that the being baptized, or the partaking of the sacrament, or the regular attendance upon the means of grace, or a scrupulous morality, with the ability to “say the Creed, the Lord’s Prayer, and the Ten Commandments, and also to answer such other Questions as in the short Catechism are contained;”¹ or anything that can be done by a man, or can be done to him, that is not repentance and faith in the crucified Redeemer, will save him, must be renounced, at once and forever. Only when the sinner is convinced that his sins are many, and great, and grievous to be borne, and fatal in their tendency; that left to himself, he has no power at all, because he will never have any effectual desire, to work out his own salvation; that all his sufficiency must be of God’s grace; that that grace is only promised to him who makes now the accepted time, and the day of salvation; that there is, therefore, no reasonable hope that he will ever be cleansed by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost, shed on him abundantly, through Jesus Christ the Saviour, unless, without the delay of a moment, he becomes reconciled to God, by the death of his Son: only then is he brought into that position of soul in which he can be saved.

Such teachings then must be considered essential to a Revival of Religion. He who teaches sinners this, may rightfully be said to be laboring to produce a Revival. And that system of church order which especially favors such teaching may, without impropriety, be claimed to be specially congenial toward that co-operative energy of the Holy Spirit, which, in that teaching, it constantly invites.

Far be it from us to claim that such teaching as this is confined to Congregationalism. Still, those creeds and methods of labor which are most often found in connection with it, and with which it is popularly identified, do specially renounce and condemn all reliance upon rites, and forms, and opera operata, and do press upon the sinner the duty of immediate repentance and faith, as the absolute condition of being saved; and hold that church membership, and the reception of the sacraments, requires them as indispensable preliminaries; in opposition alike to the Episcopal theory before noted, and the Methodist idea of admitting to quasi membership in the church, (and hence, by inevitable popular inference, admitting to heaven also,) those who merely have a "desire of salvation."¹ So that, however nearly some other denomination of Christians may share this advantage with it, it is nevertheless true that Congregationalism, more than some other systems, and at least, equally with any, is in this particular specially adapted to promote revivals of religion, by the point and practicalness and fervor of its public and private ordinary method of appeals. Consider, again in immediate connection with this:—

3. The high character of its spiritual demands. We are confident that no other form of church order is naturally led to be so vivid and constant in its appeals from the higher motives of the gospel, to those who are under its influence. The creed usually associated with it is thoroughly and earnestly evangelical; the preaching of its ministry is nearly always direct and pointed—giving no quarter to sin, and demanding for God the instant and entire surrender of the soul; while the preponderating influence of its working, as a system, is calculated to highten the popular conception of the importance of religious verities over all other things. Truth—the truths of God, sublime, eternal, saving or condemning—furnishes the root and heart of its chief interest and influence—so that if it have not that, it has nothing with which to grapple itself to the affections of men. Its unadorned and often unimpressive sanctuaries, the plainness and simplicity of its methods of worship, the absence from its public services of aesthetic beauty and ritual splendor, and of almost every such thing which, in connection with other forms of worship, attracts and delights the multitude, throw it back with hightened necessity upon its underlying doctrines, for its practical hold upon men; and this is the main reason why it is nearly impossible for the Congregational polity to work well in the hands of those who ignore or deny the essential doctrines of the Cross; and why it sets them to complaining of its barrenness, and coldness, and lack of interest, and puts them to inventing new elements of variety, and to hankering after some liturgical additions to its worship, and some "Broad Church" method of working up towards it the sympathy of the masses. Being that system of religious working which we believe was divinely intended to put the least machinery of ceremony and office between divine truth and human hearts—which all will, at any rate, probably admit actually does so—it must follow, on the one hand, that Congregationalism will fail powerfully to affect men unless the truth which is in it affects them, and, on the other, that when it is true to itself—and so to its Divine Author—it must specially press upon all who come under its influence, the vast import of the plan of salvation, and the glorious realities of the government of God.

But, in so far as it does this, it works specially and directly toward that state of things which we call a Revival of Religion—which never can exist until men are brought face to face with truth, and which God's promises make sure whenever and wherever that truth is pressed upon the soul, with no disturbing or beclouding medium between; and when, in all its length and breadth, and hight and depth, its claims are crowded into direct contact with human consciousness.

¹ "There is only one condition previously required of those who desire admission into these Societies [Methodists call their churches United Societies], viz.: 'a desire to flee from the wrath to come, and to be saved from their sins.'"—Methodist Discipline, Part I., chap. ii., sec. 1, (4.).

4. Furthermore, we submit that Congregationalism is specially adapted to promote Revivals of Religion, in virtue of its constant training toward dependence upon Divine aid. Revivals are, in a special manner, God's work. It must be the Lord of Hosts who opens the windows of heaven to pour upon the ministry of his word, and the individual labor of his professed followers a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. No dependence upon an arm of flesh will avail anything for this end. The Divine sovereignty, while merciful in its intimations of willingness to bless, on prescribed conditions, is yet jealous of the honor of the great work of saving men; and where attention is diverted from God, as the sole, as well as supreme source of spiritual healing, by the intervention of any ecclesiasticism, there is, by so much, a lessened likelihood of Divine interposition, for it is "not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." Accordingly, that system of religious faith and order which trains its adherents to look most directly to God as its guide and strength; which rests most entirely and lovingly upon his Word for constant direction in little things and great things; which most appeals to his Spirit for light upon all its ordinary works and ways, will,—so far as it is faithful to its principles,—permanently abide in that condition of special nearness of access to the Great Head of the Church, which will most favor and promote his intervention in the form of Revivals of Religion.

Now it is the distinguishing characteristic of Congregationalism, that it puts nothing between the individual soul and God,—as a friend, counsellor and guide. In the matter of personal salvation, it prescribes no baptismal purification, no atoning life of penance or good works, no ecclesiastic grace of any kind, but remits the inquiring soul directly to the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sins of the world. And when that soul has believed, and hopefully been washed and sanctified, and justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God, and has come into the covenant relations of the Church, it puts it under the tutelage of no Priest nor Bishop nor Council nor Articles nor Canons; it relieves in it no one particular of the entire responsibility of all its relations to God and to man; and sends it directly to God and to Christ, in the Word, and in the teaching of the Spirit, for all light—for its own conduct, and for its share of the responsibilities of the organization. If a question of import arises,—as whether such or such a doctrine is to be taught or suffered in the church; or whether such or such conduct in a brother is consistent with Christian principle and covenant obligations, every individual member of the church is directly charged, as before God, with the responsibility of the decision; and must go to God, in prayer and faith, to find the answer which pleases Him. No rubric fetters it; no decree of General Assembly, or Presbytery, or Bench of Bishops, or Council, or of any other church; no judgment of the past; not even any suggestions of the present, can come in to take off, hardly to lighten, this load of direct responsibility to God, and absolute dependence upon Him, which Congregationalism, in its very essence, fastens upon every believer. And by this training, we hold that this system proves itself specially congenial to Revivals of Religion, by pressing the church to ask for and receive them.

5. But that peculiarity in Congregationalism as a system of Church order and labor, which, in contrast with all other systems, most clearly gives it an advantage in the matter under consideration, is its intense development of individualism in all its church membership. It is the only form of Church working in which the responsibility of activity and success, or of sluggishness and failure is thrown directly, always, and fully, upon each one of those who are associated under it; in which the duty and the privilege of every church act, as well as of all individual Christian acts, are lodged with the individuals who compose the Church. In the monarchic forms of Church government, the responsibility and the power are with the hierarchy, in whatever guise it appears, and each private member is taught that for him obedience is the first duty, so that if things go right, or go wrong, no immediate responsibility rests upon him, unless he has failed to do something which it has commanded him to do. In other words, the hierarchy steps in between the individual Christian and his God, adjusting his relations, assuming his responsibility, and claiming his submission. In the aristocratic form of Church government the same thing, for substance, is done by the "Session," or the "Council," who receive members and dismiss them, and discipline them, and so in like manner step in between the individual and the Great Head; and train all the membership practically to feel that the responsibility is with the Church, as a body, or in its judicatories, and not upon them, and each of them, as before God bound to give answer for all. But Congregationalism rests all upon each. Every member of its churches it holds responsible, in his measure, for the soundness of its creed, the wisdom and energy of its management, the success or failure of its endeavors to do good. It trains each one to feel that if things go wrong, he cannot reasonably throw off the blame upon the shoulders of "the Church" as a body, nor upon the pastor and officers, nor upon any person or persons other than himself. It teaches each one that there is a responsible sense in which he may use Paul's words: "who is weak and I am not weak? who is offended and I burn not?" It hightens all motives to individual activity, not merely by pressing them upon the souls of its members with all the force of the Word of God, but by arranging all its processes so as to favor their development, and further their working. It is always repeating that last command of Christ in the ear of each of its faithful ones; "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." It stimulates its laity to work in Sabbath Schools, and Mission Schools; in tract distribution, and visiting from house to house, among the poor and the abandoned; to fill their pockets with appeals and their mouths with arguments, that they may sow the seed of Divine truth beside all waters, and in all way-side paths. "BY ALL MEANS SAVE SOME," is the motto which it embroiders, from the lips of Paul, upon the pennon waving from the lance which it puts into the hand of every one of its private soldiers as it sends them forth to the battle of the most high God. We do not deny that other forms of Church government do often seek to stimulate their membership to these same individual toils and triumphs, but what we claim is that no other system does, or can, logically do so. It is only by deserting, and even by doing violence to, its own first principles, that any other system can appeal, as ours always and inevitably does, to the individual force of its communion. Most others are afraid to trust the people. A prayer meeting, even, that should not be presided over by the "proper authorities,"—likely enough, then, so programmed beforehand as to prevent all, but persons previously invited, from taking part in its services—would seriously alarm them. They cannot understand how there can be freedom without misrule and misfortune; any more than the old subjects of the European despotisms can understand how we can be safe in this country without bayoneted sentinels on every corner. But Congregationalism trusts the people; educates them; leans upon them and each of them; trains them to understand that God has left the work of reconciling the world to himself through the death of his Son—so far as human agency goes—for them to do, and commands them to do it in his name, and for his sake, and in personal dependence upon him; tells them, however ignorant and weak they may be, to remember that God hath "chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise, and the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty"; tells them that a Church is not a mysterious galvanic battery of spiritual power, but rather a regimental organization, by means of which the individual soldiers can best be trained for, and marched into the fight; that pastors are captains under the "Great Captain" of salvation, whose function is rather to lead and guide the masses in their work, than to do the work in their stead.

Thus teaching, we claim that Congregationalism equally fits its membership for that individual labor with the impenitent, and that individual faithfulness in prayer and every good work, which the Holy Spirit demands as the great requisite of human co-operation in its redeeming work in revivals of religion. The great revival of 1857, was peculiarly marked in this direction. The Congregational Churches every where fell in at once and entirely with its claims for individual work, while other systems were obliged to desert their own peculiarities, and, in a manner, Congregationalize themselves, before they could become largely the channels of its power of spiritual healing. Daily noon-day prayer meetings, in unconsecrated rooms, presided over by Christian laymen, and open to the speech even of the young, were strictly Congregational means of grace; and all remember how vast and vital was their connection with the glorious result. Nor will it be forgotten that such Congregational Churches as departed most widely from the democratic freedom of their own system, and most assimilated their methods of labor and worship to those of the hierarchal systems, shared least in the blessing that then descended.

But our purpose was rather to hint, than to exhaust, the truth on this fertile subject; and the exigencies of narrowing space compel us to be satisfied with these bald and incomplete suggestions. We can only take room to add the record of our impression that they who will carefully study the history of Revivals, with the points we have raised before their minds, will be led to a thorough and abiding conviction, that, while Congregationalists have never in one single instance done full justice to the capabilities of their simple and Scriptural system in the direction we have indicated, and while God will bless all who truly love him, and sincerely try — at whatever disadvantage — to advance the coming of his kingdom, it is yet true that no form of polity so invites, or can so readily and naturally co-operate with the Holy Spirit in its copious descents of mercy, as that which first planted itself, in this hemisphere, on Plymouth Rock, reproducing here the Apostolic pattern.

Books of Interest to Congregationalists.

THE HISTORY OF HARVARD UNIVERSITY. By Josiah Quincy, LL. D., President of the University. Boston: Crosby, Nichols, Lee & Co. 1869. Two Vols. 8vo. pp. 633, 744.

This work reminds us of a shrewd farmer, of whom it is narrated that in a time when hay was scarce, he provided his cattle with green spectacles, by means of which the straw, which he plentifully furnished, became perfectly satisfactory. Had the farmer worn the spectacles himself, he would have paralleled the optical illusions which have transformed every Orthodox feature treated of in these volumes. A new issue, without an expurgation of the errors so clearly shown up twenty years ago, is as great a blunder, as it is sad that so bitter a production should be linked with the name of the venerable author. The very title of the work is a misnomer; there is no "Harvard University," as the author's own reference to legislative action shows, and as President Everett so properly insisted. The malignant treatment of the Mathers, father and son, — the abuse of the Orthodox portion of the Commonwealth when the seeds of Unitarianism were planting, — the labored defence of the monstrous perversion of the Hollis Professorship, — let alone other minor matters, — are only specimens of the exceeding charity which used to characterize — and does sometimes now — that arrogant regimes whose day of power has forever gone by. Yet this work preserves many facts which will be useful, when, in another generation, the true History of Harvard College shall be written.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF SCRIPTURE; suggested by a tour through the Holy Land. By Horatio B. Hackett, D. D., Professor of Biblical Literature in Newton Theological Institute. New and Revised Edition. Boston: Gould & Lincoln. 1860. 12mo. pp. 354.

A popular description, by one of the best Biblical scholars in the country, of what he learned in his journeys to the East, of Methods of travel, Manners and Customs, Climate, Soil, and Productions, Agriculture, Geographical Accuracy of the Bible, Jewish opinions and usages, Jerusalem, and Particular Places, — all with especial reference to explaining the Scriptural narratives, and invaluable, because so pertinent and reliable, to every student of the Bible. We have tried it in connection with Sabbath School study.

COMMENTARY ON ECCLESIASTES, WITH OTHER TREATISES. By E. W. Hengstenberg, D. D., Professor of Theology, Berlin. Translated from the German by D. W. Simon. Philadelphia: Smith, English & Co.; Boston: Gould & Lincoln. 1860. 8vo. pp. 488.

The "other treatises" are, Essays on the Songs of Solomon, the Book of Job, Isaiah, the Sacrifices of Scripture, and the Jews and the Christian Church. The author denies the authorship of Solomon, and refers Ecclesiastes to the time of Malachi, — during the Persian rule. The method of the Commentary is like that of the same author upon the Psalms, and displays the same thoroughness in criticism which generally characterizes the writer, and which make his works so useful to scholars unsatisfied with more popular commentaries.

THE WORKS OF FRANCIS BACON, collected and edited by James Spedding, M. A., of Trinity College, Cambridge, Robert Leslie Ellis, M. A., late Fellow of ditto, and Douglas Denon Heath, barrister at law and late Fellow ditto. Vols. XI., XII., XIII. pp. 461, 454, 418. Boston: Brown and Taggard 1860.

The Riverside Press in Cambridge, and the enterprise and good taste of some of our leading publishers, are working wonders in the manner of books. The clearest and cleanest of type, the most delicately tinted paper, the strongest and comeliest of neat and flexible binding, are now the exquisite dress of works whose essential beauty has long languished for some fitter outward representation. This reprint of the best edition of Bacon's works, we rejoice to learn, is meeting with a success in circulation which promises abundantly to reward the publishers for their great outlay. To tell our readers who Bacon was, would be "to gild refined gold," and to intimate to them the indispensableness of his contributions to thought and science to every man's book-shelf, would be "to paint the lily." We shall do neither, but only intimate that the fortunate possessor of these cheap yet magnificent volumes will have secured a better investment for the amount of their cost than the stock market could afford, even in better times than these. These are the first three volumes of the "literary and professional works."

THE HOLY BIBLE, containing the Old and New Testaments. Translated and arranged with notes, by Leicester Ambrose Sawyer. Vol. II., the Later Prophets. Boston: Walker, Wise & Co., 245 Washington street. 1861.

This new book is this day on our table, and we can do no more now than to call the attention of the readers of the sacred oracles to its contents. Ten thousand copies of Mr. Sawyer's translation of the New Testament have been sold in two years, and a new edition, corrected and improved, is just issued. We have in these volumes the best efforts of a devoted man, of varied ability, of ripe scholarship, and of an eminently catholic spirit, to improve in translation — not to supplant — our old family Bible. His notes, covering nearly fifty pages of this second volume, are the fruits of much study, and cannot fail to be a great help to the student of the Scriptures. The enterprising publishers are doing their part well to make these volumes readable and attractive.

THE PULPIT OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION: or the Political Sermons of the Period of 1776. With a Historical Introduction, Notes and Illustrations. By John Wingate Thornton, A. M. Boston: Gould & Lincoln, 69 Washington street. 12mo. pp. 537.

Those who, in reading the history of these United States, can discern what the fathers quaintly called "God's Hand in America," will be more deeply grounded than ever in that old Puritan notion; while those who have never discerned it before, will certainly see it after perusing this volume. Nine "Discourses" from as many of New England's ablest divines, preached in that eventful period, from 1750 to 1783, with the express aim of pointing out the nation's duty and destiny, and each Discourse prefaced by a learned historical note from the editor,—with a clear exposition in the Introduction, of the circumstances which led the ministers of New England into that style of preaching,—these are the general contents of the volume. And we are quite sure that the conclusion to which the editor himself comes, will have the assent of every reader, viz: that, in a very great degree, to the pulpit—the Puritan pulpit—we owe the moral force which won our Independence. So far as relates to the Revolutionary period, merely the notes of the editor are worth the price of the book.

JOHN ALBERT BENDEL'S GNOMON OF THE NEW TESTAMENT: Pointing out from the natural force of the words, the simplicity, depth, harmony, and saving power of its divine thoughts. A new translation. By Charlton T. Lewis, M. A., and Marvin R. Vincent, M. A., Professors in Troy University, Vol. I., 8vo., pp. 925. Philadelphia: Perkinpine & Higgins. New York: Sheldon & Co. 1860.

No more valuable contribution to Biblical learning has lately been presented, than this translation and revision of Bengel's great work. Composed originally in Latin a hundred years ago, by one of the brightest minds of the age, after an experience of twenty-seven years in expounding the Greek New Testament to students, on principles of interpretation which he was the first to discover, and which have since revolutionised New Testament criticism in Germany, England, and America, this learned work was confined to the libraries of the learned, (except in the expensive translation of Clarke's Edinburgh Library,) till now, for the first time, it is made available to every English reader for the small sum of $5,—five dollars for more than 1800 large pages of the best Biblical help that can anywhere be found,—and a liberal discount to clergymen, even at that! Omitting long comments, the author's aim, he tells us, is "briefly to point out the full force of words and sentences in the New Testament, which, though really and inherently belonging to them, is not always observed by all at first sight; so that the reader, introduced directly into the text, may pasture, as richly as possible." It is eminently evangelical in spirit, and may be used to great advantage as a closet companion; for the author has followed the rule which he gives to others in searching the scriptures,—“Apply thyself wholly to the text: apply the subject wholly to thyself.”

LORD MACAULAY'S CRITICAL, HISTORICAL, AND MISCELLANEOUS ESSAYS; with an Introduction and Biographical Sketch of Lord Macaulay. By E. P. Whipple, Esq., of Boston. Six volumes, crown octavo. New York: Sheldon & Co.

This prince of English essayists is fortunate in falling into the hands of such an editor, and such publishers. The arrangement of the essays in the chronological order of their composition, whereby the reader is enabled to mark the unfolding of a great mind; a very full index, pointing out particular topics, and even paragraphs, which one may wish to find without searching through six volumes; a biographical and critical Introduction by such an able pen as Mr. Whipple's; and the typographical beauty wherewith the whole is adorned,—these are excellencies that set this edition far above any other yet issued on either side of the water. The Essays of Macaulay, considered merely as models of composition, are the most valuable addition to the English classics that has been made since the "Spectator" was written; while as a vehicle of sound, vigorous, inspiring thought, they are probably without a parallel in the English language. We remember how, in the greenness of our Freshman year at College, our blood was stirred by listening to the declamation of a Sophomore, who had selected his "piece" from Macaulay's description of the Puritan,—and that before we knew that a Macaulay ever lived.

THE WORKS OF CHARLES LAMB. In four volumes, 12mo. Boston: Crosby, Nichols, Lee & Co.

It has been the fortune of Charles Lamb, as of some other authors, to be apparently crushed by the critics, and then to rise in spite of them, to the highest rank. His mortal sin was originality,—a departure from the beaten track, both in subject matter and style, either of which is likely to be denounced by those literary exquisites whose only vocation it is to find fault.

But the place which his writings now hold among the English classics, in defiance of carping criticism, shows the presence of genius as well as originality. Lamb has the faculty of investing the commonest thing in life with the interest of novelty, by the mere choice of words in describing it. This charm of style pervades all his writings, from the briefest business note to the gravest Essays of Elia. By the discriminating use of a single word,—a monosyllable it may be,—he often lets his reader farther into the intricacies of a subject, than others can do by a long and ponderous sentence. A large space in these volumes,—but not too large,—is filled with his letters to Coleridge, Southey, Wordsworth, Hazlitt, Wilson, and other kindred spirits, whereby we are made acquainted with a constellation of luminaries, of which Mr. Lamb was but a single bright star. The American publishers have conferred an obligation on their literary friends which will not fail to be appreciated.

TEXT-BOOK OF CHURCH HISTORY. By Dr. John Henry Kurtz, Professor of Theology in the University of Dorpat; author of "A Manual of Sacred History," "The Bible and Astronomy," etc., etc. Vol. I. To the Reformation. Philadelphia: Linday & Blackston. 1860. 12mo., pp. 554. For sale by Gould & Lincoln, Boston.

A great amount of matter is here condensed into the smallest size consistent with clearness. Dr. Kurtz is a Lutheran, and he does not hide the fact; but is candid and honest, and, he is thoroughly evangelical. He states his own opinions on proper occasions, which we like. He is not so profound as to see causes where none exist; nor does he content himself with a mere narration of isolated fact. His plan is,—The Preparatory History of the Church, The Primitive Church, The Development of the Church in its Ancient and Classical Form, The Church in its Mediæval and Germanic Form of Development,—and we wait for the Reformation, in the next volume.

THE VOCABULARY OF PHILOSOPHY. Mental, Moral, and Metaphysical; with Questions and References for the use of Students. By William Fleming, D. D., Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of Glasgow. With Additions, by Charles P. Knuth, D. D. Philadelphia: Smith, English & Co. Boston: Gould & Lincoln. 1860. 12mo. pp. 662.

We believe in and buy dictionaries, vocabularies, &c., with devout faith. Not knowing every thing, they are constantly on hand to relieve our ignorance of terms. This book is just the thing in its line, and we have referred to it already enough to know its variety and fullness. A more scientific friend tells us it is reliable. Any body troubled as we are, i. e. with a lack of wisdom, will do well to get this volume.

LECTURES ON METAPHYSICS AND LOGIC, by Sir William Hamilton, Bart., Professor of Logic and Metaphysics in the University of Edinburgh. Edited by the Rev. Henry L. Mansel, B. D. LL. D., Waynflete Professor of Moral and Metaphysical Philosophy, Oxford, and John Veitch, A. M., Professor of Logic, Rhetoric, and Metaphysics, St. Andrews. In two volumes. Vol. II. Logic. Boston: Gould & Lincoln. 1860. 8vo. pp. 731.

These Lectures, the Editors inform us, were commenced by Sir William Hamilton on his election to the Professional Chair in 1836, and repeated to his classes till 1856. Though not forming a finished treatise, they yet present the Science of the laws of thought with the ability of one generally acknowledged, we suppose, to be unsurpassed, in his speciality, by any man of the present generation, and in that popular style which was suited to learners. The critical acumen, together with the immense learning exhibited, in both the main part and the appendix of this volume, will astonish the student. Of the science itself, its relations, and its applications, this work seems exhaustive; in natural order, all that can be asked; as an example of teaching, unsurpassed; in wealth of illustration investing even this dry theme with positive charms.

As to the general subject,—which he distinguishes from Psychology on the one hand, and Metaphysics on the other,—it is needless for us to do more than to recommend this work as exhaustive. But our own attention turned instinctively to the chapters upon Truth and Error; and these we wish could be thoroughly studied not only by all our ministers, but by our members at large. The "Causes of Error," and the "Remedies of False Judgments," are worth to every minister far more than the price asked for this beautiful volume; especially if faithfully applied. Sir William must have had our little New England in mind, or else,—we are very much like other people. In either case, there is here a capital map of our various controversies.

Publishers who issue such works as Gould & Lincoln do, are public benefactors.

A MAN, by Rev. J. D. Bell. Philadelphia: J. Challen and Son. 12mo., pp. 462. 1860. For sale by Messrs. Crosby, Nichols, Lee and Co.

Mr. Bell is a young Methodist clergyman, of high repute in his own denomination of Christians, as a poet and belles-lettres scholar. He has here undertaken a popular and poetical series of essays about man, in the various aspects of his character. Many fine things are said, and many true ones; but on the whole the work does not strike us as being one that will leave any very powerful impression on the generation which receives it.

HINTS IN THE FORMATION OF RELIGIOUS OPINIONS. Addressed especially to Young Men and Women, of Christian education. By Rev. Ray Palmer, D.D., Pastor of the First Congregational Church, Albany. Sheldon & Co., 115 Nassau street, New York. Gould & Lincoln, Boston.

We have here fifteen admirable discourses by an able, devoted pastor, on great themes, addressed to an interesting class in the community. It will require all the skill and energy of the enterprising publishers to give this valuable book half the circulation to which its merits entitle it. The kind and winning manner in which the author approaches his readers, and the affectionate style of his address, are well calculated to gain confidence and insure a good result.

VIEW OF THE STATE OF EUROPE DURING THE MIDDLE AGES. By Henry Hallam, LL.D., F.R.A.S., Foreign Associate of the Institute of France. In 3 vols. crown 8vo. pp. 484, 404, 488. Boston: Crosby, Nichols, Lee & Co. 1861.

The great and standard value of Hallam's histories is well known. There have been some ten editions of this work published in England, besides one or two in Paris, and one in this country. He has been called the "judicial historian," on account of the soundness of judgment and thorough impartiality of his views and statements. While, therefore, it must be confessed that he lacks the same thoroughness in theological researches which he displays in other directions; and while he is specially deficient in familiarity with German researches on topics germane to his subject; his great work here reprinted is yet vastly in advance of anything else in our language on its theme, and is indispensable to the student.

This edition is neat, accurate, and beautiful—from the Riverside press—and has an admirable index.

QUIET THOUGHTS FOR QUIET HOURS. By the author of "Life's Morning," "Life's Evening," "Sunday Hours," &c. Boston: J. E. Tilton & Co. 1861.

None who have perused "Life's Morning," or "Life's Evening," will need our commendation of this production from the same pen. Strictly religious in its character, its lessons are illustrated by stories and incidents that cannot fail to "please the reader on" to the last page of the book, if he steps one foot into the first.

HYMNS AND CHOIRS: OF, the Matter and Manner of the Service of Song in the House of the Lord. By Austin Phelps and Edwards A. Park, Professors at Andover, and Daniel L. Furber, Pastor at Newton. Andover: Warren F. Draper. Boston: Gould & Lincoln; Crosby, Nichols, Lee & Co. 1860. 12mo., pp. 425.

There is a great deal of curious information in this volume about hymns, as well as thorough discussion of the principles of the "service of song." It may be that the fact that this work is a result, and in some sense a defence, of the principles underlying the "Sabbath Hymn Book," will trouble some minds; it does not ours. In our first number we commended that work; and time and a partial use has only deepened our liking. That we are not alone, is shown by its increasing use. Rev. Dr. Campbell, in the British Standard, says:

"The selection, in point of magnitude, is enormous, while the quality is of the very best description. We have twelve hundred and ninety Hymns, to which are added Chants in abundance, with Doxologies. . . . The mere index is a considerable publication. . . . Such is the work, and we need not hesitate to affirm that it is incomparably the most comprehensive and complete hymn-book in the English tongue."

In reading the third chapter, it should be remembered that its author is a man of enthusiastic musical ability, warm-hearted piety, and cultivated taste, and that his views on Congregational singing are therefore entitled to great respect.

THE MISSIONARY SISTERS. A Memorial of Mrs. S. H. Everett and Mrs. H. M. Hamlin, late Missionaries of the A. B. C. F. M., at Constantinople. By Mrs. M. G. Benjamin. American Tract Society.

In their lives lovely and useful, and in their death not separated. One in purpose, toil and sympathy, there is a fitness in associating them thus in their life-history. Beautifully engraved likenesses form an attractive frontispiece, and every following page well repays reading.

DISCOURSES, DOCTRINAL AND PRACTICAL. By Edward N. Kirk, D.D. American Tract Society.

Thirteen sermons on topics of deep and vital interest to our race, written in the author's stirring and eloquent style, could not fail to be both instructive and interesting, and so they will be found. This volume is on excellent paper, beautifully printed and bound, and for eighty cents can be secured to any drawing-room or library. Neither should be without it.

TWELVE DISCOURSES. By Henry Martyn Dexter. Boston: Printed for sale at the Ladies' Fair for the furnishing of the new Pine Street Meeting-House. November, 1860. [For sale by Crosby, Nichols, Lee & Co.]

We take advantage of the absence of our editorial brother, to make public mention of this beautiful volume. The imprint refers to a movement now successful, which has lifted a burden of thirty years from one of the most efficient churches in Boston; and which has done it only by the power of a purpose to furnish accommodations to the masses at a reasonable expense. If the author had done nothing more than inspire and sustain, against almost overpowering obstacles, that noble determination, —it was enough, thus to have planted a Church on the best locality at the "South End," re-suscitated an almost hopeless enterprise, and inaugurated a new era in the preaching of the gospel in Boston. It will be an auspicious day for religion here, when the "Berkeley Street Church" is dedicated.

But this volume is far more than a memorial. These sermons are examples of evangelical truth appealing to the reason as well as the affections. They meet cavils in a kind spirit; answer objections; and press home the truth to the heart itself.

Whatever may be said of the claims of the Bible by its own authority,—the public mind is so far affected in this center of infidel pretension, that to exhibit Bible truth as thoroughly reasonable and practical, is particularly demanded. We do not know that this was the object of the volume before us, but it is its result. Sound truth, thorough common sense, a devout spirit, and a wide range of felicitous illustration,—especially from practical life,—make up a volume which, though modestly bearing no publisher's name, is particularly appropriate to the times.

OUR MOTHER. A Memorial of Mrs. S. C. Farley Maxwell. Boston Massachusetts Sabbath School Society, 13 Cornhill, Boston.

A pleasant and useful book, printing and binding to fit,—as the excellent Treasurer of the M. S. S. Society would be likely to make them. The conscientious devotion of Mrs. Maxwell, her systematic use of time, her skillful and faithfully executed plans for doing good, are worthy of imitation.

Rev. REUBEN EMERSON died in South Reading, March 11, 1860, aged 88 years. Mr. Emerson was born in Ashby, Mass., August, 1771, and was the son of John and Catherine Eaton Emerson, and grandson of Deacon Brown Emerson and Sarah Townsend Emerson, of South Reading. He was 56 years pastor of the same Church of which his grandfather was deacon. He graduated D. C., 1798, was ordained at Westminster, Vt., 1800, and was installed October, 1804, in Reading, now South Reading. He married Miss Persis Hardy, of Bradford, Mass., by whom he had five children, two of whom, Charles Milton, (born 1802, graduated at Dartmouth College in 1826, now a lawyer in New Orleans,) and Catherine A. R., survive. His wife died fifteen years before him.

"He was a man of study," says Rev. Dr. Storrs, "and brought from his treasures things new and old,—a man of fixedness of purpose —swerving neither to the right hand nor to the left to please men; a preacher of righteousness to the full extent of his commission, and instant in season and out of season in declaring the counsel of God; in the pulpit, the lecture-room, the Sabbath School, the social gathering, and at the fireside, his lips kept knowledge and poured forth instruction; neglecting no opportunity to serve Christ among the old and the young; in the chamber of sickness, at the bedside of the dying—the grave of the dead or the house of the mourner.

"He loved the prosperity of Zion, and prayed for the peace of Jerusalem. No benevolent enterprise—no association of the wise and godly, no judicious plan for the extension of the gospel, and the amelioration of fallen humanity's condition, failed to enlist the sympathies of his heart, the labors of his hands, and the eloquence of his tongue.

"With him to be always zealously affected in a good thing was the settled principle of his action; and whether in defence of the cardinal doctrines, or the subordinate duties of revealed religion, whether in the publication of God's truth, or overthrowing the fortresses of error, whether in urging the claims of Jehovah Jesus to universal homage, or the claims of depressed humanity to protection against injustice, or vindication from the insults of pride and power, this principle prompted every movement, and inspired every beholder with conviction of his unwavering fidelity to the Master he served, and his singleness of aim at the regeneration of the world, and the filling up of heaven with ransomed multitudes from earth.

"Best were his last days,—sweetest, his last comforts,—strongest his last hopes,—most blessed his closing assurance of an abundant entrance into the presence of Jesus. Could the voice that poured sweet music from his lips in earlier days, have been loosed from nature's infirmities, as he neared the heavenly world, we had heard the joyful shout—

"Bright glories rest upon my sight
And charm my wondering eyes,
The regions of immortal light,
The beauties of the skies."

The settlement of a colleague during the latter period of his life, permitted him to give himself still more intently to the Sabbath School interest, with which he had always been identified. At the monthly Sabbath School Concerts he was present, and recited his verses with the youngest; and it certainly was not the least interesting feature of these occasions thus to see the old man of eighty-eight, and the infant of four or five, drawing their spiritual nourishment from the same source, and learning in the same great school of Christ.

Rev. NOAH EMERSON died July 8, 1860, in Shinnecock Reservation, L. I., aged 72. He was born in New Ipswich, N. H., in 1788. He was the youngest of eight sons of Mr. John Emerson and Catharine his wife, who were natives of South Reading, Ms.

Noah spent most of the years of his minority in laboring upon his father's farm, but early expressed a strong desire to obtain an education for the Gospel ministry. Having devoted himself to the service of Christ, he made a public profession of religion in Hancock, N. H., under the faithful ministry of the Rev. Ried Paige, entered Middlebury College in 1810, and graduated in 1814. His theological education was obtained in the Seminary at Andover.

Having become a preacher, he was employed in the service of the Maine Missionary Society, and did much in strengthening the feeble churches in the new settlements of that State. In that service he continued until the year 1825, when he was settled as pastor of the Church in Baldwin, Maine. There he labored with great diligence and fidelity until January, 1850, when he resigned as pastor, and removed to Hollis, N. H., the native place of his wife, a daughter of the Rev. Eli Smith, late pastor of the Congregational Church in Hollis. There he resided as his home, supplying vacant parishes and preaching occasionally, till his decease.

He ever aimed to do all in his power for the benefit of his fellow-man, and the benevolence of his heart prompted him to self-denying efforts for the cause of Christ and the claims of humanity. Though he had no children to provide for, he practiced the strictest economy, regarding all that he possessed as not belonging to him, but as a steward of God. And so free was he from ostentation in doing good, that he would not let his left hand know what his right hand did. He remembered them that are in bonds as bound with them. So deep and strong was his sympathy for that class of people, that he formed the purpose of going to the Island of Jamaica and spending the remainder of his days laboring for the improvement of those who had emerged from the darkness of slavery. But his purpose was defeated by a painful visitation of Divine providence. Though not permitted, through physical infirmity, to execute his benevolent purpose, his heart burned with sympathy for the millions in our own land, who, by unrighteous laws, are denied the rights of citizens. This led him to publish the offer of one hundred dollars for the best tract on the duty of praying for the slaves. The tract was written and the premium awarded and paid.

Being unable to take the charge of a parish, and anxiously longing to do something as a minister of the Gospel, his mind was drawn toward a remnant of the tribe of Shinnecock Indians, on Long Island, dwelling on a reservation from the town of Southampton, given them by the State of New York. Early in May, 1860, under the approval and supervision of the Executive Committee of the American Missionary Association, and at his own charges, he commenced his labor in his new field, preaching on the Sabbath and superintending a Sabbath School, with great fidelity and acceptance, until the 8th of July, when, in the midst of his religious services, he was seized with paralysis and expired in a few hours.

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

Rev. GEORGE B. LITTLE, pastor of the Congregational Church in West Newton, died at the residence of Rev. Dr. Peck, in Roxbury, July 20th, 1860, aged 38 years and 6 months.

He was born in Castine, Me., Dec. 21st, 1821, (the youngest of ten children,) where, at the age of fifteen, he joined the Congregational Church, in company with his father and oldest brother. He was graduated at Bowdoin College, in 1843, having pursued his preparatory studies at Leicester Academy, Ms. He completed his theological course at Andover, with the class of 1849, and was ordained pastor of the First Church, Bangor, Me., on the 12th of October following. Here, for the space of eight years, he labored "in season and out of season," under the excitement of revival scenes, and the depressions of spiritual declension, till, in the autumn of 1857, his overtasked eyes, which had been gradually failing, were so disabled as to necessitate a change in the routine of life. Meanwhile, he was offered the professorship of Latin and Modern Languages, in Amherst College, which his qualifications and tastes would have led him at once to accept, but for the warnings of a distinguished oculist, whom, for the first time, he then consulted. Convinced that he could neither take the professorship at Amherst, nor continue in the pastoral office at Bangor, without the risk of losing his eye-sight entirely, he was persuaded to accept a call to settle over the Church in West Newton, with the mutual understanding that his eyes should have rest from writing sermons. Here he was installed, on the 12th of November, 1857; and here, during the two years of extraordinary religious interest that followed, he fulfilled all the functions of a Christian minister with universal acceptance, and large success. But scarcely had the new year of 1860 commenced, when, after attending the weekly prayer-meeting, in which he seemed to speak with more than his customary vigor and force, he was seized with hemorrhage of the lungs, from which he never so far recovered as to visit the sanctuary, or even to converse with those who came to see him, without great fatigue. A voyage to Southern Europe, from which he hoped much, availed nothing; and he returned to die in the family of a friend, where he stopped to rest before reaching home.

Mr. Little was endowed with superior natural gifts, which, highly cultured and sanctified, gave him superior rank in his profession. His scholarly productions pleased the man of taste, while their invincible logic convinced his understanding, and the godly sincerity with which they were pressed home in their application, captured the heart. Remarkably terse in his style, and vivacious in his delivery, he seldom had a drowsy hearer. His sensitive nature would have suffered keenly from the rough treatment which even ministers of Christ sometimes receive, as the apostles did often, from "unreasonable men;" but always kind and courteous himself, he always received the same treatment in return. Perhaps this natural and instinctive shrinking from posts of public responsibility, curtailed the sphere of his usefulness—a more pardonable offence, to say the least, than the attempt to trade with talents that the Master has never given.

There was in Mr. Little a completeness, both of mental structure and religious character, which but few men possess,—a symmetrical development of all the parts. His productions, too, whether written or extemporaneous, had a finish about them which left his hearers with the impression that they had got the whole subject. In commending the gospel to others, he often availed himself of such arguments and illustrations as could be drawn from his own experience of its preciousness and power. Living near to Christ himself, he was accustomed to speak of him as a present Saviour, always at hand. It was a leading point in his preaching, and became more and more prominent as his ministry drew to a close.

Wonderful was the calmness with which Mr. Little composed himself to die, when this was all that remained for him to do on earth. Many of his remarkable sayings, during his last days, as recalled by Mrs. L., who was constantly with him, we learn are about to be printed—not published—for the consolation and instruction of his many bereaved friends in the two places of his charge.

Soon after his settlement, at Bangor, Mr. Little married Miss Sarah Edwards, daughter of the late Dr. Elias Cornelius, whom he has left with two young children—Mary and Sarah Cornelius—too young to appreciate the greatness of their loss.

Dea. JOHN CLEVELAND PROCTOR, died in Boston, August 21st, 1860, aged 74 years.

He was born May 19th, 1786, in the town of Essex, Ms. His early life was spent in Henniker, N. H., where he first commenced business, in company with his brother-in-law, the late Hon. Judge Darling. In 1804, he removed to Boston, where he was actively engaged in mercantile pursuits till near the close of his life—a period of more than forty-five years.

At the age of twenty-three, he made a profession of religion by uniting with the Church in Henniker, N. H. This relation he removed to the Park Street Church, Boston, in 1815, and was, four years afterwards, elected to the office of deacon in that Church. For the first ten years after its formation this Church had been, much of the time, without a pastor, and had been favored with the services of only two deacons. The election of two such brethren as the subject of this notice and the late Jeremiah Evarts, to the office of deacon, soon after the settlement of the Rev. Mr. Dwight, gave a new impulse to the enterprise of evangelical Christians in the city. It was soon deemed expedient to increase the number of Orthodox Congregational churches, and Deacon Proctor was among the foremost to colonize. In 1827, he united with other brethren, dismissed from the several churches for that purpose, to constitute the Salem Church. He remained actively devoted to the welfare of that Society till there was a call, in 1835, for men to assume the responsibility of a similar organization in another part of the city. Salem Church having become well established, he left it to share the sacrifices involved in commencing the Church of which the late Rev. William M. Rogers became the pastor. In both of these churches he filled the office of deacon during the whole term of his membership.

In the later years of his life, he has been connected with the Mount Vernon and Shawmut churches—where his contributions, his prayers, and his efforts, have been greatly instrumental of promoting the welfare of both those branches of Zion.

But it was not only in the building up of his own Church that Deacon Proctor was zealous.

He was no sectarian, and his sympathies were easily enlisted in every benevolent movement. His early exertions in originating some of our city charities were energetic and effective. He was especially instrumental in establishing and sustaining the Sabbath School system, when it did not find the favor which it since has. Perhaps no individual was more active in the incipient steps which resulted in the systematic organization of the City Mission. Indeed, there was scarcely a Society for the moral and religious welfare of the city, in whose efforts he did not share.

Deacon Proctor was emphatically an earnest Christian. While he eagerly engaged in the pursuits of business, he did not loiter in the higher work of life. From the commencement of his religious profession to his last sickness—a period of more than half a century—he pursued, with unabated zeal, the life of one who was alike willing to toil or suffer in the service of Christ. He had a measure of the Apostle's experience, who wrote to the Corinthians of being "in weariness and peacefulness; in watchings often, in fastings often, besides those things which were without, and which came upon him daily—the care of all the churches." Social in his disposition, and naturally fond, as other men, of the pleasures of society, he would allow no indulgence in the innocent recreations of life to draw him from religious engagements. He possessed a peculiar gift for personal religious conversation. It was his habit to seek opportunities of addressing individuals directly; and there are many who can testify to his affectionate faithfulness, even with strangers, on these occasions.

Prayerfulness was a characteristic trait in Deacon Proctor's piety. There are few who have spent so large a portion of their time at the mercy seat. It was his practice to carry everything that concerned him, secular or religious, to God. Lying down, or rising up, going out, or coming in; riding, walking, kneeling, sitting or standing, were alike to him proper occasions, and proper positions, for calling on the name of the Lord. He had faith in special prayer, and was accustomed to set apart seasons for seeking specific blessings. Not only has he been known to rise up a great while before day, to seek the solitude of prayer, but whole nights have been so devoted.

The love for meetings for prayer, which might be termed his ruling passion, culminated in an almost unbroken attendance, for more than ten years, upon the Daily Morning Prayer Meeting, at the Old South Chapel.

His voice, now hushed on earth, is no doubt united in heaven with that great multitude who surround the throne of God, saying, with a loud voice, "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory, and blessing."

Rev. AMHERST L. THOMPSON died at Mt. Seir, Oroomiah, Aug. 25, 1860, of typhoid fever, in his 26th year. He was born in Peru, Ms., but, while yet a child, removed to Amherst, which he ever after regarded as his home, although his father's family, some years since, removed to the West.

In the spring of 1849, in consequence of impressions made upon his mind by the death of his pastor, Rev. Pomeroy Belden, he was led to a personal consecration of himself to Christ. The change was marked and radical, — though but a boy of fourteen, he became a man in thought, purpose, and action. The law, that ever run through his life, was the law of obedience. His post of duty he not only felt to be the best place, but the only place which a child of God should seek.

He united with the Second Congregational Church in Amherst, Jan. 6, 1850. Immediately upon this, he became impressed with the idea that he ought to preach the Gospel, and many an earnest conference between himself and pastor, followed in relation to it. His own father was willing to give him his time, but could do nothing more towards helping him to an education, and he had no friends who were willing to assume the burden. Believing, however, that if God had any thing for him to do in the ministry, he would put him into it, he resolved to go forward, trusting in Providence to show him the path of duty. Accordingly, in the spring of 1850, with only ten or twelve dollars in money, and not knowing how he was to obtain another cent, he entered Monson Academy to prepare for college. He had a strong arm and a brave heart, he could saw wood, or do any thing to help him on his course. But he was oftentimes in great straits for want of funds, and twice, at least, — once in the academy and once in college, — referred the matter directly to God, on this wise. He told his Heavenly Father his needs, and then said to Him that if help did not come, within a given time, he would take it as an indication from Him, that he was not wanted in the ministry, and would turn aside to other pursuits. And, strange as it may seem, in both cases, the help came within the set time, in a way that seemed almost miraculous.

He graduated at Amherst College in 1856.

His theological studies were completed partly at New York, and partly at Andover. The question of devoting himself personally to the work of missions, early engaged his attention, but it was not finally settled till about the beginning of his last year in the Seminary.

Ever after he decided to go on a Foreign Mission, he seemed to dwell in perpetual sunshine; it was not a cross, but a great joy to go hence and preach the Gospel.

He was ordained to his work, Feb. 2, 1860, in the Second Church at Amherst, and was married at the same time, to Miss Esther E. Munsell, of the same Church. He preached his last sermon, in Boston before Rev. Mr. Dexter's Church and Society, on the afternoon of the Sabbath before he sailed. Those who heard him will not be likely to forget the man, or the sermon. Himself and wife, in company with eight other missionaries, sailed from Boston Feb. 13, 1860, on their way to Oroomiah.

He reached his place of destination about the first of July. On the evening of the 16th of August he was taken with a severe chill, which, after some hours, was succeeded by a terrible fever, that, after nine days, on the 25th of August, completed its fatal work. He sleeps, by the side of Stoddard, in the little mission burying ground on Mount Seir. It is a mysterious providence that so manifestly put him into the ministry, and led him to his chosen field of labor, and permitted him just to look at its waving harvests, without gathering a single sheaf into the garner!

An estimate of the man may be given in few words. His intellect was vigorous, keen and discriminating. He had great executive talent, strong common sense, coolness, and that rare power which is always equal to emergencies, and which would have made him invaluable as a missionary.

His imagination was brilliant, — gorgeous sometimes, — and threw a charm over all he wrote and said. He could hardly have failed, at home or abroad, to have stood in the forefront of popular, effective preachers.

As a man, he was modeled after a large pattern, — was generous, honorable, true. As a Christian he was humble, earnest, sincere. At his graduation at Andover, he delivered an essay on "the Congregational Church Polity adapted to the Foreign Missionary work," which was published in the January No. of this Quarterly for 1860, and which is full of apt and earnest thought.

His course of education was a battle with poverty and its concomitants, but he bravely fought it out and conquered. He was qualified for wide usefulness, and his friends had expected great things of him. But he has done his work early,—his life is complete at twenty-five, and he has taken the crown at the moment he had put on the full armor of God for battle.

God's purpose in his early death will not be known on earth, but we are sure that his life was not wasted. Like the alabaster box of precious ointment, it was broken upon the head of the Redeemer, and its perfume shall be grateful wherever that life was known, or the story of it shall be told.

Rev. JOHN LEWIS died in Plattville, Wisconsin, September 2, 1860, aged 43.

Mr. Lewis was born in Walpole, Ms., July 19, 1817. While a lad he was employed in the bookstore of William Pierce, Cornhill, Boston, where the writer of this first knew him. He attended on the ministry of Dr. Lyman Beecher, and at the age of fourteen was hopefully converted. He pursued his preparatory studies at Phillips Academy, graduated at Dartmouth College in 1840, and Union Theological Seminary in 1843, and was married in the latter year to Miss Electa Page, daughter of the well known Harlan Page, of New York.

After laboring four years as a missionary in Western Wisconsin, Mr. Lewis received a call to the pastorate in Plattville, which he accepted, and continued to fill till a short time before he died, when he resigned on account of failing health. On the first appearance of his disease—consumption—he visited Europe, spending nearly a year in the vicinity of Lake Geneva, returning home last autumn.

Mr. Lewis's labors were greatly blessed in the salvation of sinners, and in building up one of the strongest churches in Western Wisconsin. He went forth like a true missionary, unlike too many who emigrate to the West, not to "find a place," but to make one. Would that the West was blessed with more such devoted workers in Christ's cause. He was an eminent friend of education, and did much to establish, in its present high position, the Plattville Academy. He was also one of the founders of Beloit College, of which he had been a Trustee from the beginning.

Rev. ABEL McEWEN, D.D., died at New London, Ct., Sept. 7th, 1860, aged 80 years.

He was born in Winchester, Ct., Feb. 13, 1780. His early aspirations were toward the legal profession, but his father, a deacon and a rigidly religious man, declined aiding him in his studies for the promotion of what seemed a mere worldly ambition. The manner of his conversion to Christ, shows by what varied means the gracious Spirit works. He was present in Hartford, on a certain "Election Day"—an occasion that, in those early times, called together large numbers of clergymen. A pastor from Massachusetts asked young McEwen in regard to a religious awakening then prevalent in many parts of Connecticut. To his great chagrin, he was unable to give the information which seemed to have been confidently expected from the son of a deacon. This incident, under God, wrought within him till it finally aroused his conscience, and resulted in his conversion to Christ. "Now," said his delighted father, "I will help you through College and into the ministry."

Dr. McEwen graduated, with the valedictory, at Yale, in 1804. Hon. John C. Calhoun was a classmate, and received the second honor. He studied theology with Dr. Timothy Dwight, and was settled as pastor of the First Church in New London, in 1806.

Here a great work awaited him. His predecessor, Rev. Henry Channing, an uncle of Dr. W. E. Channing, of Boston, had lapsed, during his pastorate, into Socinianism, and the Church was in a state of confusion and ignorance as to all essential Christian doctrine. The new pastor restored the ancient landmarks, and brought back the Church to a general soundness in the truth. Meanwhile, the neighboring churches—most of which were either devoid of pastors, or rent by division, or wandering into error—found in him an invaluable counsellor and guide. The religious interests of Eastern Connecticut are under inestimable obligations to him.

He retired from the active duties of the pastorate in 1854, retaining a nominal connection with his Church; and Prof. T. P. Field, of Amherst College, was installed as his successor, June 5, 1856. He has continued to minister occasionally, up to a very recent date. His half-century sermon, in 1856, awakened a wide interest among his parishioners and friends. His funeral took place at the church in which so often his loved voice had been heard, and a commemorative sermon was preached on the occasion, by Rev. Mr. Field.

Rev. SEPTIMIUS ROBINSON died in Morristown, Vt., Sept. 27, 1860, aged 70 years and two months. He was in the 26th year of his pastorate at Morristown, and there were but three ministers in Vermont older in their pastorates than he was.

He was a lineal descendant of John Robinson, the father of the Pilgrim Fathers. His parents, Eliab and Lucy (Richardson) Robinson, commenced their married life in Windham, Ct., but removed to Poultney, Vt., where he was born, July 27, 1790. At the age of thirty-one, he became a hopeful subject of renewing grace, and soon turned his attention to the ministry. He read theology a year with the Rev. Rufus Cushman, of Fairhaven, and about two years with various members of the Rutland Association, by which body he was licensed, at Clarendon, Sept. 29, 1823. His first settlement was at Underhill, Vt., where he was ordained March 3, 1824. Rev. Josiah Hopkins, D. D., of New Haven, preached the Ordination Sermon. An interesting revival soon ensued, as the result of which, the church was nearly doubled in numbers and greatly strengthened in all respects. He was dismissed Oct. 31, 1826, just about three years from the time he commenced preaching as a candidate.

He was installed over the Congregational Church in Fairfax, Feb. 21, 1827. Rev. Simeon Parmelee, D. D., preached the Sermon. As the Church was able to support preaching only half the time, he divided the other half of his time between the churches in Fletcher and Waterville. Revivals occurred at the last two places, and twenty additions were made to the Waterville Church. The labors of so extensive a field proving too severe, he requested a dismissal at the end of two years, and removed to Milton, where he was stated supply for six years, from Feb. 1, 1829, to Jan. 31, 1835. Two seasons of revival occurred during his ministry at Milton; one in 1831, when more than sixty were added to the Church, the other in 1834, as the fruits of which fifteen were added.

In February, 1835, he received a call to the pastorate of the Congregational Church in Morristown, which being accepted, he was installed July 1, 1835, Rev. Simeon Parmelee, D. D., again preaching his Installation Sermon. The house of worship was owned jointly with the Baptists, who occupied it one fourth of the time. This fourth Sabbath Mr. Robinson spent in gratuitous labors among destitute churches, of which there were not a few in the vicinity. In 1839, the Church, having some practical realization of the truth of the adage that "partnership is a good ship to sail in, but a bad ship to come home in," built a new house, which was their own and not another's with them, and therefore he supplied that pulpit constantly. No powerful revivals accompanied his labors in Morristown, but few years passed without some conversions. About a hundred additions took place during his pastorate, and the congregation was so much increased that it became necessary, two years ago, to enlarge the house of worship.

In September, 1813, he married Lucy, daughter of Jonathan Stoddard, of Pawlet, Vt., by whom he had Betsey Ann, Henry Wright, Le Roy, James Caswell, and Septimius Dwight. She died April 21, 1834, and he married, Jan. 6, 1835, Semantha, daughter of Col. Asahel Washburn, of Montpelier, Vt., by whom he had Charles Edward, born Nov. 1, 1835, died Feb. 24, 1840, William Albert, born Feb. 24, 1840, and Laura Semantha, born Feb. 20, 1852.

Congregational Library Association.

At the last quarterly meeting, November 23, J. WINGATE THORNTON, Esq., of Boston, read a paper on the "Historical Relation of the New England Pulpit to the State,"—a document prepared with great care and embodying the results of a thorough examination. The oppressions which the Puritans suffered at the hands of Elizabeth, James I., Laud, and other weaker, but not less wicked oppressors in Old England, together with their avowed religious aim in colonizing New England, and the consistent way of their going to work in the accomplishment of it—the historical facts relating to these several topics were adduced as showing how the early divines of New England fell into the habit of preaching so much on patriotic themes (or political, as they would now be called) and to what extent they can be justified therein. A full unfolding of the subject made clear this conclusion, viz.: "that, in a great degree, to the pulpit—the PURITAN pulpit—we owe the moral force which won the Independence." The paper has since been published as an Introduction to Mr. Thornton's "Pulpit of the American Revolution," a volume of rare historical and patriotic interest, just issued from the press of the Messrs. Gould & Lincoln, Boston.

A word to the friends of this Association who have not made their donations. The broken-down health of the Secretary, which compelled him last spring to suspend his labors as financial agent (as noticed in Vol. II. p. 349 of this Quarterly) was not restored in season to resume those labors before an unexpected panic and revulsion in the business of the country rendered it hopeless to do so. The one united rally, therefore, which it was proposed to make in completing the endowment of the institution by paying off the debt on the building, is necessarily postponed for the present. Still, there are probably those who can make their intended donation as well now as ever. Let all such know that it never can be more welcome. Some pastors may find it practicable to take that collection which was deferred last year. Let them understand that the offer then made, of the Congregational Quarterly, still holds good. If only such in each congregation as might be induced to become members by the payment of one dollar, were to do so at the present time, when there is not a cent paid out for collecting funds, the enterprise would not only be saved from disaster, but kept on its way.

American Congregational Union.

The closing quarter of our work would have been much more prolific in good results than any preceding, had the means at command been adequate to the wants of Congregational Churches, destitute of houses of worship. But the resources, so limited, have brought the Trustees now, in the matter of appropriations, to a "dead lock." Since the last report in these pages, they have made CONDITIONAL appropriations, to eight churches, amounting to $1,925.00. The Treasurer has paid in the mean time to churches, as follows, viz.: Mount Pleasant, Io., $250, to Toledo, Io., $250; to Canton, Ms., $300; to Neponset, Ms., $350; to Leavenworth, K. T. $500; to Pecatonica, Ill., $225; to Poosapatuck, L. I. (Indian) $50; to Hyannis, Ms., $200; to Galesburg, Mich., $90.00, special, from the Congregational Church of Collinsville, Ct. Total, $2,215.

But there are applications in hand from one church where $100, from three where $150 each, from eight where $200 each, from ten where $250 each, would enable the applicants to complete their sanctuaries and pay last bills. Besides these there are fifteen others where larger amounts are wanted. And there are still others which are waiting to see whether there is a prospect of help before they apply. Every one of these churches is where there ought to be a Congregational Church, and where there will be one, and that a self-sustaining one soon, if not at once, if suitable houses of worship can be secured. A little money invested in this way would do speedy, permanent and incalculable good.

Will the Congregational churches lend a helping hand and sustain this church-building work? That is a question in which the vital interests of Congregationalism in this country, and thus far Christianity, are deeply involved. A church without a sanctuary is a soul without a body, seeking rest and prosperity, but finding neither. There is believed to be now a very general conviction that this is a needed work, "but how can we bring in a new object?" "Too many now!" "Unless you can make thirteen months in a year I do not see how a place can be made for your cause." Such are the exclamations of pastors and others, and this is as fatal to the Treasury as open opposition or indifference. It should be understood by all, 1. That this organization is the only legitimate child of Congregationalism that proposes to take care of its churches and to help them speedily and economically into a condition to take care of themselves:—

2. That every other benevolent organization has a common paternity in other denominations and has a claim from two, three, six or ten, as the case may be; while the Congregational Union must be helped by Congregational Churches alone, or receive nothing:—

3. That every other denomination has its own organizations for its own perpetuity, and so looks after its own peculiar work, each believing that "he that provideth not for his own, especially those of his own household has denied the faith and is worse than an infidel":—

4. That these very Catholic Societies, for whose sake the claims of the Congregational Union are thrown upon the impossibilities of a thirteenth month, would find it for their interest to give place in turn to this,—say each once in three or five years, giving this a place every year, and it would raise up from 50 to 100 churches a year, which would speedily refund four fold more than would be relinquished:—

5. That this church-building work is not "Sectarian," but simply helping EXISTING, feeble Congregational Churches into a condition to live. It is providing for and taking care of our OWN:—

6. That this organization cannot go forward and do the work so much needed, and so remunerative when done, without the sympathy and contributions of Congregational Churches. Is it wise, is it Christian to give this cause the go bye when it so underlies all others; when it can be prosecuted with so little, if that little is certain?

STATISTICS OF THE AMERICAN ORTHODOX CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES, AS COLLECTED IN 1860.

COMPILED BY REV. A. H. QUINT.

EXPLANATIONS.

I. AUTHORITIES.—The following tables are compiled mainly from the Minutes of the various State, Territorial or Provincial organizations, as published in 1860, (the names of which, with their officers and times and places of next session, follow the "List of Clergymen,") and are corrected and completed by various persons (generally the Statistical Secretaries) in their various localities. For the sake of uniformity we have reduced them to the form most generally prevalent, and which is the basis of all. The differences between our "totals" and those in several of the State publications, is explained by the corrections made, and by the transfer of churches from Associations out of their own State, to their proper statistical place.

II. ARRANGEMENT.—The States are arranged in their usual order of enumeration; the towns in each State, alphabetically; churches in each town, according to age; and, of the church, first, its town,—secondly, its locality in the town, if special,—and thirdly, its name, which is always, or is intended to be, followed by "ch."

III. DETAILS.—The columns specifying Churches and Ministers are corrected up to the date of printing, although churches formed since the statistics of any State were printed by their own bodies, are included in the number of churches, but are suffered to make no alterations in the total membership. The month and day of dates will be generally found in the Minutes of the respective State organizations.

The letters 'p.' and 's.s.' denote respectively, 'pastor,' and 'stated supply.' One, regularly chosen pastor, and actually and formally settled as such, (in whatever way the parties choose,) is 'pastor'; all others, 'stated supplies'; the pastorate is, theoretically, a permanent office; that of 'stated supply' is temporary. When neither designation occurs, the actual position of the minister is to us unknown.

All Post Office addresses are to be found in the "List of Clergymen" following these tables, and not in the tables themselves.

Where the term 'vacant' is found in the column of ministers, it by no means implies that the church is destitute of preaching or ordinances, but that it has no one person regularly supplying its pulpit. 'Com.' in this column, signifies 'commenced to labor.'

Church members are reported at a date varying in the respective States, but specified in each case. Additions, removals, and baptisms, cover the year ending with the date last alluded to. 'Absent' members are non-residents, and are included in 'males,' 'females,' and 'totals,' unless express mention of the contrary is made. 'Sabbath Schools' include actual membership of officers, teachers and scholars, of home and branch schools, at the date of reporting, unless specially stated otherwise. Discrepancies between the sum of males and females, and the 'total' in any case, are caused by the neglect of some churches to distinguish as to sex; the proportion of each is not affected.

IV. DEFICIENCIES.—When blanks occur in the columns of figures, they are never to be considered as equivalent to 'none,' (which is always designated by a cipher,) but as showing that no returns have been received,—and generally denote ignorance or carelessness. In no instance are figures copied from returns of previous years; when we have found this deleterious practice followed, we have struck out (not the names, but) the figures; and we have inserted the aggregate of the membership of such churches, from previous reports, at the close of the table of each State.

The list of churches in each State is to be regarded as complete, except where express mention is made to the contrary.

Mistakes will occur. Heartily thanking those who sent us notice of errors in our last year's issue, we again ask information as to every mistake, however slight.

SUMMARY.—CHURCHES : 30 with pastors, 69 with stated supplies, 15 with ministers not designated, 45 vacant ; Total, 159.

MINISTERS in pastoral service : 27 pastors, 53 stated supplies, 9 not designated ; Total, 89.

CHURCH MEMBERS : 2,404 Males, 4,164 Females, 5,259 not specified ; Total, 11,827, of which 689, (and a great many more unreported,) are absentees.

ADDITIONS in 1859-60 : 366 by profession, 331 by letter ; Total, 697.

REMOVALS in 1859-60 : 91 by death, 372 by dismissal, 16 by excommunication ; Total, 459.

BAPTISMS in 1859-60 : 101 Adult, 131 Infant. In SABBATH SCHOOLS, 9,379.

CONTRIBUTIONS : (from 34 churches,) Home expenses, $51,808.52, Charitable, $7,159.50 ; Total, $58,968.02.

☐ The above summary is very inadequate. There are at least 250 Congregational churches in Ohio ; but three-fifths are independent or connected with Presbyteries. The total membership is nearly or quite 20,000. Besides, of the 159 enumerated above, 66 make no report of additions or removals. A similar defect exists as to Sabbath Schools, of which there are doubtless 25,000 members. Of the above churches, 29 are Welsh, with 1,709 members.

Unable to distinguish, in several instances, the Congregationalists from Presbyterians, in the list of Convention ministers, we insert all, except such as are found in the lists of the Old or New School Assemblies; the small number possibly gained is doubtless more than counterbalanced by Congregationalists unknown to us, or settled over Presbyterian churches.

"It is still with us," writes the Secretary of the Union, "a day of small things;" but through the blessing of God, we have made considerable advance in our organization during the past year. Our amalgamation with the Canada Congregational Missionary Society is working well. We have received a few devoted brethren to fill some of our destitute churches, and others, I hope, will soon follow. Our Union meetings this year were highly encouraging. We have had nothing like them during the seven years I have been in these Provinces. We all felt it good to be there; and the whole proceedings were of such a nature as to cause us to thank God, and take courage."

These churches are under care of the "American Missionary Association."

NEBRASKA AND OREGON. (Deferred from p. 113.)

We had hoped to have in this issue, statistics from all our General Associations. NEBRASKA and OREGON have disappointed our expectations. As the best we can do, therefore,—

NEBRASKA is bounded,—as we learn from that excellent work, "Warren's Geography,"—N. by British America, E. by Dakota and Iowa, S. by Kansas and Utah, and W. by Washington Territory. "Countless herds," adds Mr. Cornell, "of bison, elk, and deer are found in this Territory;" the churches seem equally countless. The map marks on a large portion of the country,—"elevated arid plains"; such are their statistical tables also. Any more definite information we are unable to give, as the statistical mails have ceased running since the fall of 1853, at which time there were 8 Congregational churches in Nebraska, viz.: Brownville, T. W. Tipton, Minister; Decatur; Florence; Fontanelle, E. B. Hurlbird; Fort Calhoun; Fremont, Isaac E. Heaton; Omaha City, Reuben Gaylord; and Plattford. These churches had a membership of 144. As two years have now elapsed without tidings, great anxiety exists in regard to their safety.

P. S.—The above had just been put in type, when the intelligence arrived that communication is reopened; and that a new church had been organized in that Territory, November 18, 1860, of 7 members, at Weeping Water, melancholy but appropriate place at which to part with this ghost of Nebraska statistics.

OREGON is supposed to be one of the United States. It was bounded, when last heard from, N. E. by Washington Territory, S. by Utah and California, and W. by the Pacific Ocean. "The soil is, for the most part, fertile. The climate is mild for the latitude. The leading exports are lumber, live stock, and flour. The settlers have suffered much from the Indians."

A year ago it had the following churches and ministers: Albany, Thomas Condon, s.s.; Corvallis, Milton B. Starr, p.; Dalles, William A. Tenney, s.s.; Eola, Obed Dickinson, s.s.; Forest Grove, Eitanah Walker, s.s.; Oregon City, George H. Atkinson, p.; Portland, P. B. Chamberlain, p.; Salem, Obed Dickinson, s.s.; Sand Ridge, vacant; Tualatin Plains, John S. Griffin, p.; Total, 10 churches and 8 ministers; and in these 10 churches were 230 members (96 males, 134 females); and in their Sabbath-Schools were 238 persons. Their other ministers were Cushing Eels, Principal of Tualatin Academy, Forest Grove, Washington Co.; Horace Lyman, Professor in Pacific University, Forest Grove; Sidney H. Marsh, President of Pacific University.

To the brethren of these two localities we commend the remarks of the Secretary of the UNION OF NOVA SCOTIA AND NEW BRUNSWICK. "I have no doubt the statistics of our churches which appeared in your January number [1890] awakened much sympathy and prayer in our behalf amongst your brethren in the States. This I infer from the letters I have received, and the reports of various Associations which have been forwarded to me as Secretary of the Union." That is what we aim at. If any body thinks that any particular love for figures brings together these Statistics, he is very much mistaken. The over-work necessary, often by night, has had no attraction in its drudgery. We do it because we want to see our whole denomination from the Atlantic to the Pacific bound together by mutual acquaintance, sympathy and labor. We want the strong to see the needs and struggles of the weak, and the weak to take courage as they look upon the grand old roll of stout and liberal churches pledged to "bear one another's burdens." We want our ministers to know every spot where a brother is laboring; in the wear of bustling cities, or where in quiet heroism he works on, only to see the result of his labors steadily float away to growing towns. We want, above all, to pave the way for the intelligent development and earnest application of all our resources, for the sake of the Great Cause, in whose service no denomination can point to a nobler influence in the past, none command more ample powers in the present, none live under heavier responsibilities; and this in no spirit of sect, but side by side with all other churches of our Lord and Saviour. When the rapidly-hastening time comes for the Church general to resolve on "preaching the gospel to every creature" in our land, the value of these figures and others like them will be found.

Is it too much to ask, that the churches for whom this labor is gratuitously performed, should give us the little information we need from each?

In the course of our work, the names of various other ministers have appeared in lists other than those of their residences. These are of two classes.

I. MISSIONARIES. There are a hundred and fifty Congregational Foreign Missionaries, but we have the names of only the following:

Thomas L. Ambrose, Persia.	Wm. W. Howland.	Ira F. Pettibone, Constantinople.
W. A. Benton, Mt. Lebanon, Syria.	William Ireland, South Africa.	Stephen C. Pixley, South Africa.
Thomas S. Burnett, Madura, India.	B. Labaree, Jr., Oromiah.	Gilbert Rockwood, Pekin.
Wm. B. Capron, Madura, India.	Charles Little, Madura, Hindostan.	David Rood, South Africa.
Geo. B. Clafin, Mendi, W. Africa.	W. W. Livingston.	Marshall D. Sanders, Ceylon.
Lewis Grant, South Africa.	Dwight W. Marsh, Mosul, Turkey.	Josiah Tyler, South Africa.
Joseph K. Greene.	William Mellen, South Africa.	Geo. T. Washburn, Madura, India.
Alden Grout, Umvodi, So. Africa.	Chas. F. Morse, Northern Armenia.	Edward Webb, Madura.
George F. Herrick.	Benj. F. Parsons, Sivas, Turkey, A.	Crosby H. Wheeler, Turkey.
James Herrick, Madura, India.	Josiah Peabody, Erzerroom, Persia.	Hyman A. Wilder, So. Africa.
Milan H. Hitchcock, Jaffna, Ceylon.

II. OTHER MINISTERS (reckoned with their respective States, in the Summary), whose names appear in the lists of General Associations of other than their own States, or are inserted on other equivalent authority. All these, of which we have forty, appear in the List of Clergymen.

CORRECTIONS. Some errors have crept into the foregoing tables, in spite of compiler, proof-reader, and printer,—which we correct as follows:

Page 95. Instead of 1st and 2nd lines, read, for Connecticut Summary,—

SUMMARY.—CHURCHES: 186 with pastors, 67 with stated supplies, 30 vacant; Total, 283.

MINISTERS in pastoral service: 189 pastors, 67 stated supplies; Total, 256.

" 104. Total Additions in Illinois Summary, 1,816.

For one other error we hold ourselves particularly responsible. On page 74, the two churches in Bristol, Me., appeared to have a Sunday School, each, of 210 members. That 75 Church members should find 420 Sabbath Scholars seemed an evident error; and, there being no time to write, we inserted interrogation points. We confess the fault; and regard it as an evidence of "sin being the means of the greatest good,"—inasmuch as, without this fault, we should not have called attention specially to the fact that a minister in a country town in Maine has succeeded, by enthusiasm and labor, in enlisting almost an entire population in Sunday Schools, and thus in setting a noble example for all his brethren. The minister is Rev. John U. Parsons. Send and ask him how he did it.

² In the States where blanks appear, no columns are inserted for Contributions; it is greatly to be desired that such reports should be had; Massachusetts will next year be reported in this particular.

REMARKS UPON THE STATISTICS.

The general improvement in the collection of our denominational statistics, significant of the increasing definiteness of our denominational lines, renders it much easier this year to compare our numbers with those of past years. The ground has not entirely been canvassed yet, but very nearly so. We cannot have really accurate statistics until,—we urge it upon every Statistical Secretary,—every Church of our faith and order, whether reported or not, is enumerated in the tables, as a basis for entire completeness. To carry out this work, incidental to their great object, no body can better attempt than the American Congregational Union,—which would do no bad thing, if it added a recognized Statistical office to the work of its Secretary. Indeed, its Secretary was the first to put together our separate State reports.

The following comparative tables, for which we have revised and corrected previous reports, will show the figures for four years:

Concerning these figures,—

1. They are estimated from the best resources at command, and cover, each year, the United States, British Provinces in North America, and Jamaica.

2. Only a portion of the Associations have reported Sabbath Schools year by year. In 1857, only 12 associations; in 1858, 14; in 1859, all except Connecticut, Minnesota, Nebraska, and Nova Scotia; this year, all but Nebraska. In the States reported in both years, the net increase this year is 17,215. Many schools are still unreported, and, after a calculation, we are satisfied that our Sabbath Schools number at least 280,000 members.

3. The increase in the number of ministers is to be attributed, in a great measure, to the more careful and complete enrolling of names. Between one and two hundred others are probably omitted, because not reported to or by any Association. It would be a great comfort, statistically, if the directions of one of the Western Associations were general,—“admit no names from this State not recognized by the Association.”

4. Of the ministers reported as without pastoral charge, many are preaching from Sabbath to Sabbath; 10 Presidents of Colleges are reported; 45 Professors in Colleges and Theological Seminaries, 22 teachers of Academies, etc., 5 agents or treasurers of Colleges, 41 Secretaries and agents of Benevolent Societies, 9 city or town Missionaries, 4 chaplains, 6 editors, 1 Secretary of State, and 2 in office thereof, 1 member of Congress, etc.

5. The General Associations and Conferences are mere voluntary collections of ministers or churches, with no ecclesiastical authority whatever. The names of these bodies, with lists of officers, times and places of next meeting, etc., are found at the end of this number.

We suggested, last year, to the various Associations the desirableness of agreeing upon some uniform plan as to the essentials of statistics. We proposed the items in these tables—with two additions—as the best; the additions are, the insertion of the date of ministerial ordination, in every case, and the month and day of all dates.

We are glad to see that most have fallen in with these suggestions. We now propose another head, viz., Contributions, sub-divided into “Home” and “Benevolent.” We suggest, also, the advantage of following the order of columns on these pages, as most do,—Maine, Iowa, Kansas, and California, alone breaking the usual arrangement. Will they not “conquer their prejudices” for the general convenience?

We make one other request, viz., put everything into alphabetical order which is capable of it.

LIST OF CLERGYMEN: WITH THE POST-OFFICE ADDRESS OF EACH.

Concerning the following list several things are to be noted:

1. We have inserted the names of all Orthodox Congregational ministers as reported to us by the officers of the various General Associations and Conferences, but no others unless they came to us from a very reliable source. We have diminished our number thus, by expurgating the relics of departed Lists. Any individual thus extinguished can be resuscitated next year by applying to the Statistical Secretary in his State.
2. Only ordained ministers are included in our Tables, or in this List; but so many churches now have *Licentiate*s as stated supplies, that we shall probably add next year a list of such.
3. We have corrected this List up to the latest moment. It will frequently disagree with the foregoing Tables, on account of our here using information received after the former had been printed. We claim no intuitive knowledge of anybody's residence; what we do know, came by mail. The same medium would have located several wandering brethren, who will probably complain of our ignorance.
4. In searching for a name of various spellings, look at each form. All contracted names,—like "Mc" and "St.,"—are arranged in order of contraction, and not of the full word.
5. In deciding between Presbyterian and Congregational character,—a member of an ecclesiastical or ministerial body of either denomination, acting as temporary supply to a church of the opposite sect,—retains his own ministerial character; but a minister actually settled as pastor, is necessarily to be reckoned with his church. No man can belong to our denomination and still be a Presbyterian pastor. We remind brothers dropped from our List on this account, that the Plan of Union is dead. Members of both Presbytery and Association or Conference, we turn over to the former, unless we have reason to consider them as actually Congregationalist temporarily or carelessly connected with a Presbytery. When men shall cease trying to ride two horses at once, our perplexities will be greatly diminished.
6. Send us information of all mistakes.

OREGON.

At the very latest moment, the following Statistics of OREGON came to hand. We need not say that their late coming excited a degree of mild exasperation. Possibly our brethren did not receive our request for the statistics in manuscript, as last year—a compliance with which would have placed them in their proper position in our pages. We insert them here, but do not change our Summary: the slight variation being of little account. We beg all our brethren, next year, to send us as early as possible after September 1st, their figures. If not then printed, send them in manuscript.
